SENATE CHIEFS IN WHITE HOUSE ECONOMIC TALK

Secretary Mills Declares No Course of Action Decided Upon.

BOTH SIDES DEMAND SALES LEVY BALLOT

Disputed Plan Seems to Be Beaten as Chamber Is Pledged in Battle.

The embattled tax and economy bills were discussed for two hours at the White House last night, but, according to an announcement, "no course of action was decided on."

Those called in for the conference by President Hoover were Vice President Curtis, Secretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills, and five influential Republican senators—Watson, of Indiana; Smoot, of Utah; Moses, of New Hampshire; McNary, of Oregon, and Reed, of Pennsylvania.

George L. Harrison, governor of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, also was present. He is a week-end guest here of Admiral Cary T. Grayson.

Secretary of the Treasury Mills, spokesman for the group, said that the purpose of the conference was to make a general check-up on the prospect of an early balancing of the budget.

Mills Describes Session.

"We talked about the revenue bill and the economy bill and the prospects of an early enactment of both," Mr. Mills said.

"Was the sales tax discussed?" he was asked.

"Yes," he said, "but not chiefly."

"No course of action was decided on," he said.

Mills declined to say whether President Hoover would send a message to Congress concerning the tax bill. Asked whether his statement that no course of action had been decided on meant that President Hoover would stand aloof in the sales tax fight, Mills said:

"What I said was that there was a general discussion with the senators, but that no decision was reached."

Mills remained with the President for 45 minutes after the others had left, giving rise to the supposition that he was collaborating with the President on a message to Congress. Pressed on this point, the Treasury chief, a New Yorker, said:

"I can't speak for the President. You are just a crowd of Seaburys—that's all."

President Hoover called the nocturnal conference after returning from his Rapidan camp at 5:30 in the afternoon. Vice President Curtis and the senators arrived about three hours later.

Harrison's Presence.

Leaving the White House two hours later, the senators were uncommunicative. Smoot, who is in charge of the tax bill, did admit that the sales tax had been discussed. Moses said he could describe the subject of the conference in two words—"public affairs."

The presence of Gov. Harrison, of the New York Federal Reserve Board, was explained later by Secretary Mills. He said the President learned that Harrison was here visiting Admiral Grayson, and called him in for a discussion of the general business situation.

All those present at the conference

DECISION DUE TODAY ON BRUENING'S FATE

Chancellor Asks Hindenburg to Reiterate Confidence in Government.

Berlin, May 29 (U.P.).—The government of Chancellor Heinrich Bruening, who has been the strength of "moderate" Germany against Fascism, was in a precarious position tonight as the nation awaited a momentous decision by President Paul von Hindenburg on the political future of the Reich.

The chancellor visited President Hindenburg at noon, after the aged soldier had returned from a vacation at Fuedeck. Bruening placed before him the position of the cabinet and asked for a firm reiteration of the president's confidence in the government. Otherwise, he will not continue in office.

President Hindenburg said he desired 24 hours in which to consider. The chancellor will visit him again at noon tomorrow, and at that time it's believed a definite decision will be made on whether the Reich will continue under Bruening's guidance or will swing to the "right wing," which is dominated by Adolph Hitler's militant Fascist party.

Chancellor Bruening summoned the cabinet to meet at 10 a. m. tomorrow, preparatory to his second conversation with President Hindenburg.

The Democratic Montagspost interpreted this unusual procedure as indicating increased tension in the government and the possibility that the resignation of the entire cabinet would be discussed at the session.

Secrecy surrounding the conference led to many rumors adverse to Bruening. The Telegraphen Union Agency said the differences known to exist between the chancellor and the president had been intensified and that the rift probably could not be

Ministry Denies Hitler Got Special Ship Honors

Berlin, May 29 (A.P.).—The ministry of defense issued a statement today denying special honors had been shown Adolf Hitler, the Nazi leader, when he visited the warship Koelln recently.

The Democratic press had reported torpedo practice and fresh uniforms of personnel were among the honors accorded the Fascist leader. The defense ministry said Hitler merely happened aboard during an exhibition period held for the benefit of the public.

Gen. Mah Crushed, Japanese Declare

4,000 Chinese Killed or Wounded in Battle Near Hulan.

Harbin (Monday), May 30 (U.P.).—Chinese troops under Gen. Mah Chan-shan were crushingly defeated by a combined army of Japanese and Manchukuo troops in a battle near Hulan today, Japanese claimed. Four thousand of Gen. Mah's men were killed or wounded, it was claimed.

The battle had been planned as a major offensive against irregulars who have been terrorizing the Japanese-sponsored "independent" state of Manchukuo.

Lieut. Gen. Shigeru Honjo, commandant of all Japanese forces in Manchuria, had been maneuvering for a decisive battle with Gen. Mah's troops for more than a week. Mah, the elusive one-time minister of Manchukuo, evaded a pitched battle against Japan's armored cars and bombing planes until today.

Mah, who first won fame as the Chinese defender of Manchuria when Japan first started the campaign that ended in revolt of three rich provinces from Chinese rule, later joined the forces he had opposed and was named war minister of the new "nation." He did yet another change of front, however, and is now counted one of the most determined enemies of the Manchukuoan government.

TRADE REVIVAL SEEN AS TOPIC FOR LAUSANNE

MacDonald Is Reported as Favoring Discussion at June 16 Parley.

PLEADS FOR BROAD VIEWS ON PROBLEM

Mellon Also Is Said to Be Connected With Proposal of British Premier.

London, (Monday) May 30 (A.P.). A plea for converting the Lausanne reparations conference next month into a conference on world trade was made today by Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald in an interview with the political specialist of the Daily Mail, who visited him at Lossiemouth, Scotland.

If the suggestion gains support, it may, the newspaper said, completely alter the complexion of the conference and cause the United States to be more than an observer.

"The problem to be faced is not merely the recovery of one nation, but the restarting of world commerce," Mr. MacDonald was quoted as saying.

Hopes for World Cooperation.

"I should like to see the Lausanne conference boldly tackle this much bigger problem in all its important aspects, as well as dealing with debts and reparations. It is an international problem and no nation can settle it for itself.

"The British representatives will strive with might and main to get the conference to face this large issue. The experience of all countries in the last six months particularly ought to induce every nation to take broader views than some of them have done hitherto."

The Mail said it understood the suggestion for broadening the basis of the conference, which is scheduled to meet at Lausanne, June 16, was one of the main topics Prime Minister MacDonald discussed with Secretary of State Stimson in a recent transatlantic telephone conversation.

Mellon Reported Interested.

Ambassador Andrew W. Mellon also is likely to be connected with the new development, the newspaper said, adding that it believed the American Ambassador had discussed the proposal with the British government.

Mr. MacDonald, the newspaper said, has been greatly benefited by his stay at his home in Lossiemouth, where he went to rest after an eye operation. The correspondent reported the prime minister was anxious

6 Killed, 70 Wounded In Hindu-Moslem Riots

Bombay, India, May 29 (U.P.).—Rioting between Hindus and Moslems was renewed over the week-end, with 6 killed and 70 injured. Business has been practically at a standstill for two weeks, the price of food has soared and there is a lack of fresh supplies.

The government promulgated a new ordinance in Bengal, replacing the Bengal emergency powers ordinance to authorize more drastic repressive measures against terrorists. At New Delhi, the capital, police discovered guns, bombs and Communist literature in a raid on a house believed to be owned by members of the "Hindustan Socialist Republican party."

Oil Line Break Ends Pacific Hop Attempt

Browne Narrowly Misses Death at Takeoff; to Start Again at Once.

Seattle, Wash., May 29 (A.P.).—Nathan C. Browne, New York flier, was forced back on an attempted nonstop flight from Seattle to Tokyo today by the rupture of an oil line in his monoplane, the Lone Star.

Narrowly escaping death in the take-off from a ramp at Boeing Field, blinded temporarily by hot oil and forced to drop some of his precious fuel supply to gain altitude, Browne returned to the field after several hours in the air and immediately made plans for another flight attempt tomorrow.

While half a dozen mechanics tore into his plane to determine what caused the oil line to break and to repair a broken stabilizer brace wire, Browne sought attention for his oil-scalded eyes.

The brace wire was broken when Browne's plane skimmed through treetops after his breathtaking dash down the runway.

Browne expressed the belief the rudder would have fallen off before he reached Tokyo, but he pushed gamely on until the oil line broke. He was

'PORK-BARREL' BARB ALIBI, GARNER SAYS

"Vacillating Leadership" Is Laid to President as Rainey Joins Attack.

(Associated Press.)

Striking out again at President Hoover, the House Democratic leadership yesterday forecast that his stay in the White House is drawing to a close and said that as President he had registered "a failure practically complete."

In a double-barreled blast directed at the President's stand against the Garner relief program, Speaker Garner and Majority Leader Rainey charged he was attempting to blame Congress for conditions arising during his administration.

Mr. Garner's statement was through the Democratic national committee, while Rainey issued his at his office, following up the Texan's answer Saturday to President Hoover's denunciation of his $2,309,000,000 plan as "pork barrel" legislation.

"I have no personal feeling in regard to the President's criticism of the measures I have offered as an amelioration if not a correction of our depression woes," Mr. Garner said. "I realize it is a part of the presidential process of alibiing himself from his own inability or unwillingness to promulgate a comprehensive and adequate process of accomplishing the result."

Mr. Garner said Mr. Hoover had 2½ years to effect economies while the Treasury deficit was mounting, but that he was blaming Congress, and added:

"His necessity (to blame Congress) is the more apparent as he is a can-

Hope for Parley On China Waning

Attitude of Japanese on Protection Conference Dims Outlook.

(Associated Press.)

Whether the round table conference proposed by Japan to discuss the protection of foreign life and property by China will be held seems doubtful. Japan's views and China's views about the location for such a conference and the subjects to be discussed are clearly far apart.

The United States, Great Britain, France and Italy are in agreement that China must be represented, while Japan proposed that only the foreign powers with interests in China should participate.

It is not known whether Japan will consent to admit a Chinese representative, as the European powers and the United States have not yet submittted their views to Tokyo.

WIFE LONG MISSING; MURDER IS CHARGED

Mate of Star Tannery, Va., Man Never Found; He Says She Left Home.

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., May 29.—Frederick County officials stated tonight they planned to put Kermit Orndorff, 29-year-old Star Tannery laborer, through a severe grilling early tomorrow in an effort to find out if he was withholding information from them concerning the whereabouts of his 20-year-old wife, Frances Nicholson Arndorff, missing from her home since December 29.

Orndorff, who was arrested Saturday afternoon, in Shenandoah County by Sheriff Luther Pannett on a warrant alleging that he murdered his wife, was brought to Winchester late last night and placed in the local jail.

A cursory questioning by Sheriff Pannett and Commonwealth's Attorney Burr P. Harrison brought from Orndorff simply the statement, "I don't know where she is." After the brief questioning he was left alone.

Mrs. Orndorff disappeared from her husband's home, at Star Tannery, 8 miles west of here, presumably about 5 p. m., December 29, according to her husband's story. He declared he was at work and that she left in his absence. Orndorff never notified officers that his wife was missing, but a week after her disappearance, the husband's relatives told Sheriff Pannett "Kermit's wife is gone."

From early January until February 1 officers searched in the homes

Children Hoover Aided Back Home

Join Father Freed From Jail; Show Souvenirs Given by President.

Detroit, May 29 (U.P.).—Three tired but happy children returned to Detroit tonight after their trip to Washington to see President Hoover had resulted in the release from jail of their father, Charles R. Feagan.

Feagan met Bernice, 13; Irene, 11, and Clifford, 10, as they hurried off a bus from the East and into his arms. They all went home to talk about the visit with President Hoover and "Daddy's" release.

Feagan, charged with violation of the Dyer act by driving a car here from St. Joseph, Mo., was released on his own recognizance after President Hoover heard from Bernice the story of her father's arrest. The children were still excited over the visit with the President. Each displayed a tiny Washington Bicentennial button given them by the President.

TRIBUTE PAID TO WAR DEAD BY THOUSANDS

30,000 Witness Massing of Colors in Exercises at Sylvan Theater.

REBIRTH OF SPIRIT URGED BY WILBUR

Exercises Held Throughout Capital and Many Visit Graves of Heroes.

Thousands of persons participated yesterday afternoon and last night in the Capital's elaborate program paying tribute to the dead of the Nation's wars.

The three-day memorial service program will be climaxed ..ay when the few survivors of the Grand Army of the Republic lead a parade of veteran and patriotic organizations down historic Pennsylvania avenue.

While ceremonies were being held by patriotic and veterans' organizations in the city's parks and cemeteries, relatives and close friends of the dead visited graves to pay homage to those who made the supreme sacrifice.

One of the largest of the ceremonies was held yesterday afternoon when aproximately 30,000 witnessed the massing of colors of 250 organizations and patriotic societies at the Sylvan Theater on the sloping ground surrounding the Washington Monument. The program was presented by the Military Order of the World War and the District of Columbia Bicentennial Commission.

Declaring that "there never was a time when our Nation needed more of disinterested service by all of its citizens," Secretary of the Interior Ray Lyman Wilbur addressed the audience as the principal speaker on the program.

Rebirth of Spirit.

Secretary Wilbur said that the men whose memories we honor today suffered for the whole United States and "not for some small selfish local or provincial interest."

He said, "We need a rebirth of the spirit of our pioneer forefathers, their courage and their self-reliance.

"Our complicated economic system demands order and some centralization, but it should be operated for national purposes and not for local interests," he declared.

He made a strong plea for law observance if the United States is to be the kind of a country that Washington and Lincoln founded.

"Every city, county and State must fight for the preservation of law and order," he said. "Perhaps softer days have made us softer citizens. We need to tighten up our belts, forget our troubles and go at the job of re-

$900,000 Bond Default By Chicago Is Predicted

Chicago, May 29 (A.P.).—County Treasurer Joseph B. McDonough announced today that Cook County must default June 1 on about $900,000 in bonds and interest.

Delay in collection of taxes and failure to find buyers for $5,000,000 worth of 1932 tax anticipation warrants will be responsible for the default, McDonough said. As yet, only 41 per cent of the 1930 tax toll of $290,000,000 in Chicago and Cook County has been collected.

BONUS MARCHERS REACH CAPITAL TO DEMAND PAYMENT

Bonus Seeker Turning Back Killed by Car

Cumberland, Md., May 29 (A.P.).—Gilbert M. Case, 34, turning back toward home after leaving the bonus-seeking delegation of former service men here, was killed instantly tonight when he was struck by an automobile on the National pike. His home is in Omaha, Nebr.

Case was dead when he was taken to a Cumberland hospital by Harry H. Harvey, of Cresaptown, Md., driver of the car which struck him. Harvey was not held by police.

The victim, Harvey told State police, was walking along the National pike about 5 miles west of here. He was headed west, opposite to that taken by most of his companions, who arrived in Washington today.

Suddenly, the man, Harvey said, threw his coat into the road in front of the automobile and then fell on it. Harvey added he could not avoid hitting the man.

A half hour earlier Case stopped at the Cumberland substation of the

TROOPS AND POLICE FIGHT SPANISH REDS

Gun Battles, Bombings and Riots in Several Cities; Many Casualties.

Madrid, May 29 (A.P.).—Six persons, including three bystanders, were killed today in gun fights between extremists and government forces growing out of a syndicalist strike in various Spanish cities.

Soldiers, civil guards and police used firearms to disperse demonstrators in Madrid, Valencia, Barcelona and Seville. Four policemen and 25 civilians were injured. Many arrests were reported.

Two women were shot and killed on the balcony of their homes at Valencia while watching a fight between police and several hundred persons attempting to enter the silk exchange to hold a meeting.

A bystander was killed in Madrid when police charged a crowd attempting to raise a red flag in a plaza. A man and woman watching from a balcony were shot and wounded when police broke up a Communist meeting in another plaza with their pistols. Two other fatalities occurred in the capital.

A bomb was thrown into a detachment of guards who dispersed a group of extremist agitators at Valencia. One person was wounded in the explosion. General firing between civil guards and demonstrators in streets and on rooftops broke out. Before the battle was over one guard and eight demonstrators were wounded.

Other gun battles with casualties were reported at Seville and Bunol, resulting in the killing of a demonstrator at the latter town. In Seville a crowd fired on an infantry barracks at dawn, soldiers returning the heavy fire.

Troops at Seville were reinforced when it was learned that Communists had advanced to tomorrow a general strike originally scheduled for June 3.

310 Veterans Fed on Arrival; Sleep in Vacant Store.

PLEDGE ORDER TO GLASSFORD

Showdown Is Near on Maintenance; Plan to Wait Relief.

Weary and weather-beaten after their transcontinental trek, the first unit of veterans' bonus seekers arrived in the Capital at 5:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon to join the bonus army of occupation which is "here to stay until Congress votes one way or the other" on the bill to grant them full payment of the bonus.

Before turning into their billets for the night, Patrolman James E. Bennett, of the Traffic Bureau, told the marchers: "Fellows, you're welcome here. But the minute you start mixing with Reds and Socialists, out you go." The men cheered him.

"You won't have to eject them," said Walter W. Waters, 35-year-old leader of the marchers. "If we find any Red agitators in the group we'll take care of them and take them to the District line. We came here under the same flag for which we fought."

To Elect Commander.

Election of a commander in chief of the 1,300 bonus marchers will take place today at the billets at Twelfth and D streets southwest, with Mr. Waters generally favored to be chosen, and A. L. Taylor, a lawyer, of Portland, Oreg., as another possible choice.

That a showdown is imminent on the source of provision of maintenance for the marchers became apparent last night, with Mr. Waters announcing: "We are going to stay here until the veterans' bill is passed." Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, police superintendent, said: "If necessary, I will enforce my edict of 48 hours as the limit of their stay here. If Congress wants to foot their bills, they can stay as long as they like.

"So far the Federal Government has been no great help," said Gen. Glassford. He had previously announced that he considered it an imposition to expect the District to provide indefinitely for the men, and that if they stay, it is properly the duty of the Federal Government to assist the men.

Sleep in Vacant Store.

There will also be a "showdown" today with Secretary of War Hurley, according to Gen. Glassford, on the question of providing bed sacks and cots for the men, which the chief of police has requested.

After a meal of soup and bread had been served to the 310 arrivals at the Volunteers of America headquarters, they were taken to an abandoned department store, owned by Bieber & Kaufmann, on Eighth street near I street southeast, where they were billeted.

They will join the 1,000 veterans from all sections of the country, who have infiltrated the Capital and who will aid them in canvassing the halls of Congress to bring pressure to bear on their respective representatives to sign the petition of Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas, to bring his full payment compensation bill before the House for a vote.

The men were exhausted when they reached the billets, after trudging from the Volunteers of America mission house, and threw themselves on the hard wood floors to sleep. Lanterns are their illumination. Firemen are stationed there to guard against fire. They maintain their own police.

No delegations will be sent to senators or representatives for the

Reed Attacks Public Works Plan to Help Employment

Former Senator Scores Hoover and Urges Prohibition Repeal, Cut in Federal Expenses, Reduction in Tariff and Halt in Congressional Wailing.

By EDWARD T. FOLLIARD.

Former Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, he of the saber tongue, thinks that the idea of relieving unemployment through a big Federal building problem is "absolutely wrong."

Here for a Memorial Day oration at Arlington, Mr. Reed said yesterday that such a program, financed with borrowed money, takes capital out of productive enterprise, and sinks it into unproductive enterprise. Moreover, he said, it saddles the country with the interest charges on a bond issue, and also with the expense of maintaining the new projects.

A reporter, recalling President Hoover's charge that Speaker Garner's public works bill is a "gigantic pork barrel," suggested that Hoover and Reed saw eye to eye on the question.

"When did his eye get that way?" rasped Reed. "He is the gentleman who started the cry about public works. He was the loudest magpie in the squawking train. Uusually he is on both sides of every question, and half wrong most of the time."

Reed, a powerful Democratic figure on Capitol Hill until he voluntarily quit the Senate to seek the Presidency, gave this as his own prescription for a return of better times:

A drastic cut in the expenses of the Government and a consequent lightening of the tax burden; repeal of prohibition, reduction of the tariff, and a cessation of the "dismal wailing" in Congress. Also, he said, he favors a moderate sales tax. Ordinarily, he said, he would oppose such a tax, but now he thinks it is justified because of the emergency and because of some of the taxes that are proposed.

He expressed the opinion that real beer could be legalized by Congress without any danger of interference by the Supreme Court.

Reed, who will be Missouri's favorite son candidate for President at the Democratic national convention

German Embassy Leases Rixey Manor in Arlington

The German Embassy will be situated for the summer in nearby Arlington County, Va.

Negotiations for the leasing of the beautiful and commodious Rixey Manor House, built by the late Admiral Rixey, for many years surgeon general of the United States Navy, have been completed between the embassy and Mrs. Rixey, through a local realtor.

The Rixey mansion, one of the show places of Arlington County, is on the Glebe road and adjoins Washington Golf and Country Club. It is about a 20-minute drive from the German Embassy here.

Ambassador and Frau von Prittwitz will not occupy the summer embassy, it is understood, but will sail for their homeland within a few weeks. Herr Rudolf Leitner will be charge d'affaires of the embassy here, but the Rixey place will be occupied by Herr Johann G. Lohmann, secretary of the embassy, and Frau Lohmann, who now live at 3007 Porter

Alternates at Conventions May Take Important Roles

Unprecedented Event Is Seen by Some Leaders; Several in Congress Are Delegates, But May Be Forced to Stay in Capital.

(Associated Press.)

The Republican national convention will be just two weeks off tomorrow and Congress is still so deeply enmeshed in a tangle of titanic tasks that some leaders look for the show to be run off with alternates filling most principal roles.

Such an event would be unprecedented, although party chieftains are laying emergency plans with that in view.

Sixteen senators and as many or more representatives have been chosen delegates to the June 14 gathering at Chicago. Of course, a few will have to attend, whether Congress is in session or not, but the possibility of a national political convention conducted largely by professional and business men seems incredible—to some on Capitol Hill.

Others believe it will not make much difference. Senator Fess, of Ohio, who will have charge at the very outset as party chairman, says he and Senator Dickinson, of Iowa, the keynoter, will have to go, regardless. Representative Snell, of New York, must be there to take over the permanent chairmanship when Dickinson's reign ends.

Absence of only three from Congress naturally would not endanger the legislative machinery. But then there are such old-timers as Senators Smoot, Moses, Reed and others who are delegates and have been counted on, as in the past, to help write the platform and do dozens of other things to keep the various elements from starting rumpuses.

The same problem confronts the Democrats, whose convention meets June 27, although the picture on Capitol Hill may be clearer by that time. Nineteen senators so far have been named delegates to the Democratic convention.

Should Congress still be in session June 14, the convention tasks of the fourteen Republican senators who probably would remain here would

WOMEN'S CONCLAVE TO ASK DRY PLANKS

Curran Appeals to G. O. P. Delegates for Unequivocal Platform.

(Associated Press.)

Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, chairman of the woman's national committee for law enforcement, yesterday announced a national convention of women would be held in Chicago June 13, to prepare a demand on both political parties that no change in the prohibition laws be proposed in their platforms.

In a formal statement, Mrs. Peabody said:

"Women, half the electorate, pay their full share of taxes. They propose to secure their inalienable right under the Government to protection from lawlessness and crime due to repeated attacks on the supreme law of the land by those who threaten repeal or rebellion.

"Until the people through their representatives in Congress demand a change, no change will be made."

Quotes Bar Group Words.

She said the women's meeting would be "for united prayer and action and to present that action to the resolutions committees of the national Republican and Democratic conventions."

Mrs. Peabody quoted the judicial section of the American Bar Association as having said in 1921 that "when * * * lawyers, bankers, great merchants and manufacturers and social leaders disobey and scoff at this (prohibition) law, or any other law, * * * they are sowing dragon's teeth and need not be surprised when they find that no judicial or police authority can save our country or humanity from reaping the harvest."

"We are reaping the harvest now," Mrs. Peabody's statement said.

Curran Warns G. O. P.

Henry H. Curran, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, yesterday appealed to delegates to the Republican national convention for an unequivocal platform plan on prohibition.

In an open letter to all delegates, he said:

"It seems inconceivable that the Republican party can * * * advocate retention of the eighteenth amendment. But, if so, let the platform say so unequivocally. If the party is against the eighteenth amendment let it say so equally clearly. These are no times for temporizing. * * *"

Recalls Cleveland's Victory.

Accepting the "surmise that the Democratic platform will condemn national prohibition in no uncertain terms," Curran said the Republicans must take a frank stand against prohibition or face defeat in the election. He added:

"If you affront the deep conviction of millions of loyal Republicans in * * * fourteen presidentially pivotal States by adopting a plank that is evasive, dilatory, or anything that falls short of straight submission or straight repeal, do you think it will be strange if the wet Republicans in these States vote for the Democratic candidates on this issue—and carry the States for the Democrats? * * * Good Republicans elected Cleveland that may in 1884. They did it again in 1892."

Sinking of Grecian Seen as Avoidable

Captain Says That Turning of Chattanooga Could Have Spared Accident.

Boston, May 29 (A.P.).—Capt. H. E. Callis, of the steamer Grecian, which sank Friday off Block Island with the loss of four lives after colliding with the steamship City of Chattanooga, said today if the Chattanooga captain had turned his wheel to port the accident might have been avoided.

Officers of the Grecian testified at a hearing before the United States inspectors of steam vessels. The Chattanooga sailed last night and her officers will testify on return to this port in ten days.

The collision occurred in a dense fog shortly before sunup. Capt. L. P. Borum, of the Chattanooga, ordered the motors of his craft kept running, thus keeping the nose of his ship in the hole torn in the Grecian and allowing time for rescuing the crew.

It was estimated it took eight minutes for 29 members of the Grecian crew to transfer to the Chattanooga. Five minutes later, as the Chattanooga backed away, the Grecian went down. Three of the survivors were injured.

Mexican Line Watched For Lost Rich Farmer

El Paso, Tex., May 29 (A.P.).—Mexican border cities were checked by detectives today in an effort to trace W. W. Farish, jr., 29, wealthy Mesilla Park (N. Mex.) farmer, who disappeared May 17.

Officers said Mr. Farish, a graduate of Princeton University, was last seen by acquaintances with an unidentified companion in Juarez. He had been to this city for dental treatment several times since May 11. Workmen engaged in construction of a home at his Mesilla Park farm said when he last returned there, May 16, he packed a suitcase without stopping to confer with them and headed back toward El Paso.

Australia Cashes On 2 New Crops

Now Grows Enough Cotton and Tobacco to Supply Own Needs.

Sydney, New South Wales, May 29 (A.P.).—Australia, which ten years ago grew practically no tobacco or cotton, expects to supply all her domestic requirements this year and to have an exportable surplus next year. Formerly Australia imported the bulk of her cotton and tobacco from the United States.

So rapidly have these crops increased with the Federal Government's protection that some of the assistance given to growers is being reduced. For instance, the duty on tobacco has been lowered.

Australian tobacco growers, with an estimated crop of 10,000,000 pounds, will be guaranteed an average price of 55 cents a pound. Cotton growers will receive no bounty this year, but have been guaranteed 19 cents a pound. The cotton bounty formerly cost the government about $600,000 annually while the industry was being established.

Nation Today Bows Head To Mourn Soldier Dead

By JOHN J. DALY

DECORATION DAY,
And a nation mourns,
And a nation is proud;

For on that day a grateful people pause to pay homage to those who did their bit for Old Glory and all that it means, the land we love, the flag that flies over the cradle of liberty.

In sacred spots along the way
The people pause awhile to pray
Today;
For those whose earthly course is run,
Who look no more unto the sun,
Who lay
Their weary hearts within the breast
Of Mother Earth, to dream and rest,
For aye.
For these, on Decoration Day,
The people pause awhile from play
To pray.

AN eagle soars the sky o'erhead,
A poppy proudly bows its head of red,
Like blood with fever running wild—
The flush of youth on cheek of child—to shed
A scented tear for those who spent
Their span of life to bring content;
Who led
Their fellow mortals far from dread
And scattered rays of joy ahead—
The Dead!

FOR these the hearts of kindred sigh,
For these the flags of battle fly on high;
And everywhere, throughout the land,
The giants of oratory stand and try
To paint a picture, tell a tale,
With feeble words—to no avail.
They die,
While, bared of head, the nation bands
And, hearing drum-beats, understands the cry.
For them, no scholar needs to say
Why men and women stop to pray
today;
For them, no tongue of music's might Need take an oratorical flight away;
For here, in groves along the way,
The people go in silence, pray and stay
Just long enough to hear a voice
That comes into their hearts by choice
on Decoration Day

34 KURDS TO HANG, RECALLING HISTORY

Members of Ancient Race Started Revolt Against Turks at Ararat.

(Associated Press.)

Thirty-four Kurds are to be hanged for the revolution they waged about Mount Ararat two years ago and 500 more are to be tried by Mustapha Kemal's courts for participating in the insurrection which spread through the Valley of Araxas, where Eve is supposed to have tasted of the forbidden fruit.

The Kurds, whose ancestors ruled Babylon 18 centuries before the Christian era and 3,200 years before Turkey came into existence, always kept Turkish sultans in hot water and have been equally troublesome for the Mustapha Kemal regime.

Seven years ago they fomented a serious revolution in the Mount Ararat area and 46 Kurdish Nationalist leaders were executed, but their deaths did not stop the plots against Turkish supremacy, which blazed into another revolution two years ago.

The Turkish judge who sentenced the 46 Kurdish leaders to death in 1930 said the movement was clearly an effort to free Kurdistan from foreign rule and establish a separate nationality.

World's Oldest Tribes.

There are about a million and a half Kurds in all, and as a result of the remaking of maps through the centuries they are now living in Turkish, Persian and Iraq territory, probably more than half of them in the section of eastern Turkey which touches Armenia, Persia, Iraq and Syria.

The Kurds constitute the oldest aristocracy in the world so far as tribal names are concerned. They were fighting the Hittites thirteen centuries before Christ and they helped Cyrus overthrow Babylon and Nineveh. They fought against the Greeks of Xenophon and managed to hold their own against all comers in the turbulent Near East until the Mongols descended upon them in the fourteenth century.

Consequently, with the tradition of success at arms as their chief heritage, these nomadic peoples who have always liked Persia better than Turkey and even combined with the Christian Armenians in battling against Constantinople control, have little taste for the modernized government Mustapha Kemal has set up at Angora.

Rejected at Versailles.

The Kurds, like hundreds of other tribes in Asia, grabbed eagerly at President Wilson's pronouncements about the self-determination of nations, and had Sherif Pasha at the Versailles conference seeking the establishment of an independent Kurdish state centered about 17,000-foot Mount Ararat, where Noah's ark is supposed to have grounded after the deluge, and Arhuri, presumably the place where Noah planted the vineyards which brought him to grief.

The Versailles conference was deaf to the Kurdish appeal. The Arabs fared better in the splitting up of Turkey. But the Kurds were not crushed by their failure at diplomacy and have kept up a constant struggle against Turkish domination in their remote land without railway and highways, hundreds of miles from the sea and the Turkish center of government which is trying to modernize them.

Two Fliers Poised For Distance Hops

Hausner Again Tunes Up for Europe; Bromley Bound for Coast.

New York, May 29 (A.P.).—Two fliers, their eyes cast toward destinations nearly 7,000 miles apart, tuned up their monoplanes today in preparations for flights which will take one east across the Atlantic and the other west to Los Angeles.

Stanislaus Felix Hausner, 32, dubbed the "mystery flier" because of his reticence in discussing his plans, placed an order for a new artificial horizon to replace the one which ceased functioning when he was 300 miles on his way toward "London or Paris and Warsaw" last night.

Harold Bromley, also 32, the Dallas, Tex., flier who once got well on the way to the United States from Samushiro Beach, Japan, on a nonstop flight attempt only to be similarly forced back, set 4 a. m. tomorrow as the "zero hour" for his contemplated nonstop flight to Los Angeles.

Both had their ships poised at Floyd Bennett Field, Hausner's flame-colored, white-striped 220-horsepower craft in need of a new tail skid and slight repair to torn fabric on the rudder, and Bromley's 240-horsepower orange-winged oil-burning machine all set for the take-off after repairs to the motor had been completed.

TEMPER OF CABINET WEIGHED BY HERRIOT

Outcome of Socialist Parley May Decide; His Own Party Is Split.

Paris, May 29 (U.P.).—The "price" of Socialist participation in the new government which Edouard Herriot is scheduled to form was at issue today when the twenty-ninth National Socialist Congress convened in Jean Jaures Hall.

The outcome of the congress, which will continue until the new Parliament opens Tuesday, may decide whether Herriot's Radical-Socialist party will join with the Socialists in forming a left wing cabinet or will turn to the right-center for support.

Herriot must face a complex situation in choosing the support for his government, which succeeds Andre Tardieu's right-center regime. But his position, which is between the Socialists and the more conservative center factions, enables him to draw moderate support from either side of the chamber.

Radical-Socialists Split.

The Radical-Socialist party itself is split; the Socialist party is facing a period of bitter controversy and the outcome probably will hinge on the question of policy in regard to disarmament and finances.

The policies of the various factions, which the leaders hope to conciliate in the next three days, are about as follows:

Herriot's Radical-Socialists: Simultaneous reduction and control of armaments by international agreement; obligatory international arbitration; liquidation of intergovernmental debts; a ban on the private manufacture and sale of arms.

The "young radicals" under Herriot: Cooperation with the Socialists; more drastic measures for reduction of armaments; otherwise much as Herriot.

Opposes All Dictatorships.

Socialists, led by Leon Blum: Reduction of armaments, without firm demands for security as advocated by the Conservatives; a conciliatory policy toward liquidation of reparations and war debts; a foreign policy opposed to all dictatorships, particularly the rule of Marshal Josef Pilsudski in Poland. Blum warned Herriot that Socialists would oppose any cabinet continuing financial support of Poland.

Socialist faction, led by Zyromski and Graziani: Would participate with Herriot on the condition Herriot accepted reduction of the military budget to the 1928 figures; forbid private manufacture or sale of arms; immediate reduction of the working week to 40 hours; government control of banks; and nationalization of mines, railroads and insurance.

Socialist faction, led by Perrin and Montagnon: The same as the Zyromski-Graziani group, but in addition demand political amnesty; closing of all sectarian schools; and national insurance to protect farmers from drought and other calamities.

Then there is another Socialist group which opposes collaboration with Herriot under any conditions.

HINDENBURG DECISION ON BRUENING IS NEAR

mended. The agency predicted that Bruening would resign tomorrow.

"There is no reason to expect the government's resignation," an official spokesman said when informed of the rumor.

If he continues in office, Bruening will reorganize his cabinet and prepare for a long period of work on foreign and domestic problems which must be solved this summer.

Meanwhile, the need for governmental action continues acute. Demonstrations by jobless, clashes with police and other disturbances continued in the provinces over the week-end. At Hamburg, 25 extremists gravely injured a policeman in an attack. Elsewhere food shops were plundered.

Hitlerites Get Control Of Oldenburg Landtag

Oldenburg, Germany, May 29 (A.P.).—Adolf Hitler's National Socialists, by capturing five additional seats in the election of a new Landtag for the State of Oldenburg today, obtained a clear majority in that legislative body. They will have 24 of the 46 seats. The last Landtag, elected on May 18, 1931, was dissolved by a plebiscite.

The National Socialists (Fascists) gained today at the expense of the Social Democrats, Centrists and Communists, the last losing one and the others two mandates each. The remaining parties held their own.

Women Must Learn Shorthand.

Budapest, Hungary, May 29 (A.P.). The mayor of Budapest has ordered all women employes of the city to learn shorthand and typewriting. Dismissal is the alternative.

CHILEANS FEARFUL OF DUTY ON COPPER

Action by U. S. Might Bring On Price War and Force Open Competition.

Santiago, Chile, May 29 (A.P.).—Efforts of American copper mines to obtain a duty on copper imported into the United States are viewed in responsible quarters here as having a chance of fulfillment, in which event the American market, now the biggest there is for Chilean copper, will be virtually closed.

Such a duty, whatever the amount might be, would force the Chilean mines (which incidentally are American owned) into open competition with native-produced American copper and the powerful Belgian producers in the European sales area.

This, it is felt here, might easily provoke a price war of considerable proportions in the resulting scramble for what is left of the reduced consumption of European manufacturing plants.

Leaders of the industry here and government officials profess a belief that a duty ordered by the United States Congress, would not help the native industry there, because of the foreign competition in the export trade with low-cost Chilean and Belgian copper. But they are somewhat resigned to the situation and fear the worst, even if they have not given up hope.

For months the two big producers here, Anaconda and Braden, have been shipping thousands of tons to reserve points in the New York and European areas, and there is now an estimated nine months supply, worth well over $12,000,000, on hand at those storage points.

Meanwhile, the government is making a finish fight of it in cooperation with Peru, endeavoring by diplomatic effort in Washington to stem the tide. It is aiding the producers to maintain their output, reduced as it is, and to assist in combating restrictions and competition abroad.

Chile has three great mines, Chuquicamata, termed the "world's biggest" and Potrerillos in the north, owned by Anaconda, and Braden at El Teniente, south of Santiago, owned by the Guggenheims.

The Anaconda company has been placing more of its output in the United States than in Europe, while Braden sells considerable of its production in Europe.

There is a growing feeling here against the proposed American duty, a feeling mixed with bewilderment, because many Chileans can not see why the copper of a company operated by Americans, even though its mines are in Chile, should be taxed on entering the United States.

There is hope, however that the pressure which the Chilean government is bringing to bear through every available channel may halt the duty move.

Peru May Reduce Sol's Backing.

Lima, Peru, May 29 (A.P.).—Bills to lower the gold backing of the sol, establish a national budget commission and reduce the capital of the Central Reserve Bank have been introduced in Congress by the finance minister, Ignacio Brandariz, to ease the financial situation. The Budget Commission, composed of five congressmen and two financial experts, would control the national income and expenditures. The gold backing of the sol would be reduced from about 98 per cent to 50 per cent, with a corresponding increase in the silver and marketable paper backing.

Quake Felt in Mexico City.

Mexico City, May 29 (A.P.).—A strong earthquake shook Mexico City for one minute at 10:30 a. m. today. No damage was reported, but it was feared some might have occurred in the provinces.

Two Die in Mystery Fire.

Mexico City, May 29 (A.P.).—Two girls burned to death in a mysterious fire that wrecked the Church of Jesus Maria, at Guadalajara, early today and set fire to adjoining houses, where the girls were sleeping. The church was reported completely destroyed.

House to Decide Fate Of Copper Tariff Soon

(Associated Press.)

The fate of the 4 cent per pound copper tariff will be decided probably late this week when the Senate completes its modification of the House revenue bill and sends it back to that chamber.

As received from the House, the bill carried no copper import duty. It was inserted by the Senate upon recommendation of its finance committee. Accordingly, the House will be asked to approve the copper levy along with other Senate changes.

The strength of House supporters of a copper tariff is still a matter of conjecture, but a determined effort will be made by Representative Douglas (Democrat), Arizona, and other members, from copper producing States to obtain House approval. Most of these represent sparsely populated States and form but a small minority in the House.

Should Douglas' initial effort in this direction fail, the matter will have to be threshed out in conference by members of the Senate finance and the House ways and means committees. Among House conferees there is none considered particularly partial to the copper tariff. Should the Senate's insistence be so strong as to make the copper provision almost mandatory, it would seem probable, however, that the House would allow the duty to stand.

If Congress adjourns two weeks from now, there would be no time for prolonged conferences on the copper provision. Leaders of both branches agree the bill must become law before the beginning of the fiscal year July 1, and a compromise on the Senate's view of the necessity for copper protection would seem the probable outcome.

Bond Salesman Suicide After Hacking 2 Sisters

Los Angeles, May 29 (A.P.).—Neighbors who today entered the home of George Moss Mohr, 59-year-old bond salesman, found him dead with a bullet through the head and his two aged sisters unconscious from blows delivered with an ax. Physicians believed the sisters, Bessie, 73, and Phoebe, 76, both unmarried, to be dying.

Police said they found a note indicating Mohr, fearing approaching blindness would deprive the sisters of his support, attacked them as they slept and then killed himself. A neighbor said Mohr was told by an oculist last week that blindness was inevitable, due to a paralytic condition.

THIRD PARTY TICKET STARTED IN ILLINOIS

W. W. O'Brien Gubernatorial Candidate; Favors Cutting Government Costs.

Chicago, May 29 (A.P.).—A third party movement—directed by one of the State's best known attorneys—is under way in Illinois.

The leader is W. W. O'Brien, defense attorney in more than 200 murder trials over a score of years, but never before a participant in politics. His party he has named "The People's Ticket;" and his platform he announced today as "better government at a lower cost, and repeal of the prohibition laws."

As his party's candidate for governor, O'Brien will oppose the regular party nominees in the November election. They are former Gov. Len Small, Republican, and Probate Judge Henry Horner, of Chicago, Democrat, both politically prominent and backed by strong organizations.

"It's too early to predict victory," O'Brien said, "but we are certain of polling a lot of votes—and so are third parties in other States. If there are strong enough tickets, this should be a third party year."

O'Brien said he believed there are several strong potential possibilities for presidential candidates on a third party ticket. He did not comment, however, on a report that former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois or some other farm relief exponent may be asked to place his name on the "people's ticket."

Prior to the opening of his active campaign, O'Brien has started in Chicago a legal battle against a recently enacted ordinance forbidding all-night street parking of automobiles. Hundreds of motorists have given him traffic court summonses for violations of the ordinance, and O'Brien has promised to fight them without cost.

A complete slate of candidates will be placed on the third party ticket in Illinois, O'Brien said, and all of them will be pledged to "improving government and lowering the costs to the taxpayers."

3 Die After Long Grip on Upset Boat

Fourth Member of Party Saved by Tanker in Chesapeake.

Baltimore, May 29 (A.P.).—Three young men early today slipped from the overturned canoe to which they had clung all night and drowned in the Chesapeake Bay near Seven Foot Knoll, south of here. The fourth member of the party was rescued unconscious by a passing tanker. The victims were:

John H. Houchens, jr., 23, prominent athlete and member of the graduating class at Loyola College (Baltimore).

George Gillespie, 23, and his brother, Paul Gillespie, 22, of Chesaco Park, near Baltimore.

Lawrence Blume, 22, was saved when a mate on the bridge of the tanker W. S. Miller, bound from Baltimore to California, sighted a white object bobbing on the waves of the bay. A lifeboat was lowered and when the crew reached the canoe, the members thought Blume was dead. Only his head was out of water. The bodies of the three victims were not recovered and a Coast Guard vessel was sent to the vicinity of the accident tonight to search for them.

Suspects in Kidnaping Of Girl, 8, Are Freed

Wilmington, Del., May 29 (A.P.).—Two Philadelphians, who were detained at Bedford, Pa., last night in connection with the Hilda Brodsky kidnaping of last month, were cleared of suspicion in the case by three Wilmington detectives who questioned them there.

Detective Capt. Elwood Wilson said upon his return today that the pair had convinced him of their innocence and that he ordered them released. They are Paul Torincas, 28, and G. Morina, 42. Philadelphia authorities had had them under surveillance in connection with the Brodsky case, and when they left a few days ago for a trip West, the police here sent out fliers asking for their apprehension.

For the first time since March 8, when New Hampshire gave Franklin D. Roosevelt eight convention votes and President Hoover 11, delegate picking for both conventions will come to a full halt this week.

With Hoover assured of more than enough pledged votes for renomination and Roosevelt holding a commanding lead over a field of seven, the first of the remaining 122 Democratic and 42 Republican delegates will be selected in Florida and Mississippi, for the Democrats, on June 7. Indiana, the following day, chooses 31 for the Republicans.

in Chicago, June 27, scoffed at reports that there was a deal on whereby he would step aside and let the State's 36 delegates go to Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York.

"There has been no agreement, expressed or implied, tentative or otherwise," he said, "between any member of the Missouri delegation or myself and any candidate or the representatives of any candidate."

Concerning the convention itself, Mr. Reed said, "I don't know what's coming."

In condemning a public works program, Mr. Reed said that he had no particular individual or plan in mind. Nevertheless, his position arrays him squarely against Speaker John N. Garner, Alfred E. Smith and many others in his party.

Nonproductive Enterprise.

"You can't restore prosperity by building a lot of unnecessary and expensive buildings and levying taxes in the hope that you thereby can employ laborers," Reed said.

"What you do is to draw money out of productive enterprise, where labor is employed, and sink it into unproductive enterprise. You saddle the country not only with the interest on the money borrowed, but also with the expense of operation and upkeep of the new buildings. I think the policy is absolutely wrong."

Reed insisted that it was not the business of the Federal Government to undertake to help the unemployed.

"The Federal Government," he said, "is not an eleemosynary institution. We are not conducting an almshouse here."

Urges Reduction in Taxes.

The task of Congress, Reed said, was to cut expenses and taxes, and thereby eradicate fear. This, he said, would stimulate business and create more jobs than a public works program could ever create.

"Every time you hear a speech in Congress now," said Reed, "it sounds like a wail from Jericho. You would think the country was going to perdition."

Repeal of prohibition, Reed said, would, in addition to saving the millions of dollars that are spent for enforcement, put a billion dollars of revenue in Federal, State and city treasuries every year.

Department Abolition.

In order to effect economies, Reed said, the Department of Agriculture, the Department of Commerce and the Department of Labor all might be done away with. He spoke sarcastically of the work of the first named department in trying to teach farmers how to farm, of the Commerce Department gathering information that business already has, and of childless experts in the Department of Labor making radio talks, telling mothers how to dress their children.

Until the tariff is lowered, Mr. Reed said, America can not expect to find a market for the 10 to 20 per cent of products which it raises or manufactures in excess of its own needs. The Smoot-Hawley bill, he said, caused other countries—Canada, for example—to raise retaliatory tariff walls, with the result that trade is now shut off.

OIL LINE BREAK ENDS PACIFIC FLIGHT TRY

offered to handle the refueling hose and then drop off when Browne has enough gasoline for the Tokyo flight.

The detachable landing gear on the plane was intact when Browne returned from his ill-fated hop today, but he plans to drop it tomorrow before his midair refueling attempt in order to lighten his plane. An auxiliary landing gear inside the fuselage would be used by Browne for landing in Tokyo or en route.

Prize Deadline Near.

Browne said he would have to be on his way by 3 a. m. (Eastern standard time) tomorrow if he is to have a chance to win the $30,000 prize fund offered by Seattle business men, which returns to its donors if unclaimed before midnight of June 1.

The flier said he dropped more than 20 gallons of gasoline as he left to enable the plane to clear brush, trees and wires.

When the oil line broke and sprayed the hot lubricant over him, he said he almost cracked up as he was flying low. He said he climbed blindly as he wiped his goggles, but was not able to see very well as some of the oil had sprayed into his eyes.

To make speed back to Seattle he emptied the main fuel tank of about 500 gallons of gasoline.

U.S. Aid Held Vital In World Recovery

Paris Paper Hopes Crisis Will Pave Way for New Collaboration.

Paris, May 29 (A.P.).—The newspaper Le Temps in a leading article today, entitled "The American Crisis," declared it was impossible to solve such problems as disarmament, reparations, debts and the "new economic order" without the help of the United States. The article drew a conclusion of hope that the troubles the United States is undergoing "will recall its rulers to present realities."

The newspaper said it trusted that the distress would show the United States Government "that for any nation, however, powerful, there is no salvation possible except in solidarity and the sane practice of widespread international collaboration."

The article deplored party strife at Washington before the November elections, asserting "those are bad conditions for taking energetic resolutions." The weekly financial review of the same paper, under the signature of Frederick Jenny, expressed faith in the American dollar.

Respirator's Prisoner Freed After 9 Months

New York, May 29 (A.P.).—Fifteen-year-old Herbert D. Fuchs today was carried out of the hospital, where he spent almost nine months in a steel respirator, after disease left his lung muscles paralyzed.

"Everything looks better than I remember it," he commented happily.

Homecoming was a big event. Herbert had to hug his father, his mother and twelve brothers and sisters one after the other with his wasted arms. A shoulder and left hand still must have daily massages to restore their use. Then came his shepherd dog, given him while he was sick—"Respi," short for Respirator.

MAKE NATION SOVIET IS FOSTER'S APPEAL

Take Revolutionary Way Out, He Urges Workers as Convention Ends.

Chicago, May 29 (A.P.).—The Communist party of America mapped out today the most extensive campaign effort in its history to reach its declared goal of a million votes next November.

In 40 States, electors will be placed on ballots in support of William Z. Foster, presidential nominee, and James W. Ford, an Alabama Negro, its candidate for Vice President.

In 1928 Foster and Benjamin Gitlow polled an official 50,000 votes.

As the nominating meeting closed tonight, Foster issued a statement asserting that "the Communist party directs its main fire against the hunger and war program of the Hoover Government" and demands "unemployment insurance at the expense of the Government and employers to relieve the wholesale starvation among workers."

Urges Soviet United States.

He also said the party "calls upon the workers to fight against the war now being made upon the Soviet Union by the Japanese government with the aid of the United States Government." His statement ended with an appeal to "the workers to take the revolutionary way out and establish a Soviet United States."

William Weinstone, editor of the Communist organ, the Daily Worker, and chairman of the platform committee, said:

"We did not include in our platform any condemnation of prohibition, although we feel that prohibition is an infringement on the worker's rights. But prohibition has been raised by the capitalists as an issue to becloud the real issue of unemployment insurance."

Planks of Platform.

Planks of the Communist platform are:

"Opposition to Hoover's wage-cutting policy; emergency relief for the impoverished farmer and exemption of the farmers from taxes and forced collection of debts; equal rights for the Negro; opposition to capitalist terror and to all forms of suppression of the political rights of the worker."

Weinstone said the party also was pledged to cash payment of the bonus.

Some 1,200 delegates attended the two-day convention, more than half of them young men and women. Many of these are members of the John Reed clubs.

Most of the afternoon session was devoted to instructions on widening the scope of the Communist campaign.

Strawn Stresses Need Of Balancing Budget

New York, May 29 (A.P.).—The nations of the world should individually "devote every effort to putting its house in order" as soon as possible as a step toward economic recovery, Silas H. Strawn, chairman of the American committee of the International Chamber of Commerce, said today.

He expressed his view in reply to a questionnaire sent to him by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler on behalf of the League of Nations Associations. He believes, he said, "no single nation can pull out of the present depression while the rest remain behind," but added the opinion "the channels of finance and trade will become clogged" unless each nation, the United States in particular, maintains its national government's credit by a balanced budget and adequate economies in expenditure.

Passenger in Airplane Crash Burns to Death

Binghamton, N. Y., May 29 (A.P.). A passenger in a biplane was burned to death and its pilot critically injured today as it crashed from an altitude of 400 feet and took fire at Bennett Airport.

George Scott, 40, a mechanic, was caught in the wreckage of the dual control plane and died. Audrey Keister, 35, the pilot, was tossed just clear of the wreckage and was rescued, but not before he was probably fatally burned. The plane had circled the field several times after taking off and went into a flat spin after a sharp bank.

STATE POLICE LEAVE LINDBERGH'S ESTATE

Flier and Wife Absent From Englewood as Moving Takes Place.

Hopewell, N. J., May 29 (A.P.).—The rough-hewn tables, the hastily placed cots, the bulky files and the emergency communication system—police headquarters for t days—were borne from the Lindbergh estate today and the wide-flung search for the murderers of the flier's baby given a new base of operations.

The destination of much of the equipment was the State police training school at Wilburtha, not far from Trenton.

Col and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh escaped the moving scene, for they now are staying at the Dwight Morrow estate in Englewood, a two-hour automobile trip from Hopewell. So that the colonel may be in close touch with authorities, an enlarged police station was ordered set up at Alpine, near Englewood.

"The detail will maintain daily contacts with Col. Lindbergh," said Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the New Jersey State police, in a bulletin, "and will handle parts of the investigation centering in north Jersey and New York."

Guard Still Maintained.

It was a busy day at the big white house on the Lindbergh estate, which is once more to assume the aspect of a normal American home. Ollie Wheatley, the butler, and his wife bustled about the bedrooms upstairs, the kitchen, dining room, porch and garage, putting things to rights and clearing away traces of the recent troubled weeks. Betty Gow, nurse of the late baby, stayed to help, but it is expected she will go later to Englewood. Her brother, his wife and baby, are coming to Tenafly, adjacent community, from Scotland next month.

A guard is to be maintained at the gateway to the Lindbergh estate, for protection against curious marauders. It was indicated that the home will be kept open, with the Wheatleys in charge, at least for the time being.

At Englewood, it was said the plans of the Lindberghs still are indefinite. Friends said there seemed little likelihood they would leave New Jersey for some time, for Col. Lindbergh has assured police he will "stay by" to give all cooperation in the search for the kidnapers. Mrs. Lindbergh expects another child in the late summer.

Summer Home Readied.

The Morrow family has a summer place at North Haven, Me. The caretaker there was getting the house ready for the season, but didn't expect the family probably until July.

No new developments were reported in the kidnaping case. The new "set-up" in the search involved no reduction of personnel, Schwarzkopf said. The headquarters and files will be at Wilburtha, and press announcements will be made at Trenton, as before. The Alpine substation, which will be in close touch with Col. Lindbergh at Englewood, will be connected to the Wilburtha Training School by telegraph typewriters as well as by telephone.

John Hughes Curtis, confessed hoax negotiator, spent a quiet Sunday in jail at Flemington.

BONUS ARMY ARRIVES HERE TO DEMAND GOVERNMENT AID

next few days, said Mr. Waters. "First I want the boys who need medical attention to get proper care. For the next two days I will work to get the quarters in proper shape and getting the men in shape so that they will be presentable.

"Our men will not affiliate with any groups from other States, unless the others agree to place themselves under the same discipline and military organization to which we have submitted," he said. Qualifications to join the Oregon group are rigid, he said. The first requirement is that the veteran be a gentleman and next that he produce indisputable evidence that he is a former service man.

Thanks District for Aid.

After voicing his appreciation for the aid given by the District, Mr. Waters said he has pledged himself to assist Gen. Glassford in every respect. "There are people back home," he added, "who are trying to help us." He declined to say whether he will seek immediate Federal aid for rations and shelter.

The arrangements for the reception of the veterans at the District line on Wisconsin avenue went awry due to a misunderstanding. Trucks pressed into their service by Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, to transport the men across Maryland had been ordered to leave them at the District line, while District authorities were under the impression that the cars would bring them to the heart of the city.

Inspector L. I. H. Edwards reached Gov. Ritchie at Annapolis, and he ordered the trucks to continue into the District. "I'm glad to help the veterans out," said Gov. Ritchie to Robert E. L. Putman, maintenance inspector of the State roads commission, who was in charge of the trucks.

Mr. Waters was at the District line with police officials to greet his men. There were also a group of 300 spectators at the boundary line to greet the veterans.

Friendly Welcome.

A cordial welcome was given to them by the citizens, and all along the line of the parade they greeted, and in turn were greeted by residents in a friendly fashion.

American flags waved from the trucks as they passed into the District. Pedestrians and automobilists waved friendly greetings to the men and shouted words of encouragement, and the veterans, weather-beaten and travel-worn from nearly a month on the road, smiled at the greeters. A youngster on Wisconsin avenue, in a soldier's suit, waved to them, and some of them in tattered remnants of the days of '17 and '18 waved back.

The veterans were carried in eighteen trucks, fourteen of which were State-owned and the rest hired by the State. They left Cumberland, Md., early yesterday after spending the night as guests of the city. They refueled at Frederick, Md., and again at Gaithersburg. They were escorted by Patrolman Ralph Howard, State Policeman T. V. Moore and a picked squad from the Bethesda substation under Sergt. Leroy Rodgers.

From Wisconsin avenue the trucks turned into Massachusetts avenue to Q street to Third street to Pennsylvania avenue, where they assembled in front of the Volunteers of America Mission. Gen. Glassford and Mr. Waters sampled the food before the men were fed, to decide whether it was palatable.

While talking with the men last night, Patrolman Bennett announced that a tag day will be held Thursday by women's auxiliaries of veterans organizations in the District. There will also be a benefit wrestling bout Thursday night, a midnight show Thursday at the Gayety Theater and a boxing bout to be held, if possible, at the Washington Auditorium with the veterans as contestants. These are expected to net about $1,500.

Warning the men against associating with Communist agitators, Patrolman Bennett said: "If you get mixed up with that gang, you're through here. The Marine barracks are across the street, the navy yard is a couple of blocks away and there's lots of Army posts around. We're not going to call them. We don't want to call them, and we won't call them as long as you fellows act like gentlemen."

Henry McGinniss, of Portland, Oreg., who was stricken ill on the way here, again became ill last night, and was taken to Gallinger Hospital for treatment of bronchitis.

To Prepare Own Food.

Some of the veterans, not of the Oregon group, who arrived here several days ago, complained to Gen. Glassford about being fed cabbage water at a mission house. He immediately ordered kitchens to be used by the men, in cooking their own food, which they agreed to do. Gen. Glassford then recalled 800 letters, which were ready to be sent out asking for funds to be used at the mission house to feed the men.

Rolling kitchens from Camp Simms will be stationed today at Eighth and I streets southeast and at Twelfth and D streets southwest, where another group of 300 are housed, and the men will organize their own cooking detail and prepare the food obtained for them by Gen. Glassford.

The men were ordered to bed not later than 11 o'clock last night and reveille will be sounded at 6 o'clock this morning. Breakfast of coffee, bread and butter will be dispensed at 8 o'clock, then the men will begin preparing their own food.

Gen. Glassford will daily inspect the quarters; and the men will do their own cleaning, cooking, wood chopping, and all other tasks necessary for their maintenance.

Organized Into Six Companies.

The men are organized into six companies, with a captain, lieutenant sergeant and mess detail in each. There is also a headquarters company to take care of administrative details, as well as their own police force.

The discipline, said Mr. Waters, and his aid, George Almond, also of Portland, is stricter than the Army. The men are not permitted to converse with spectators. They must have an honorary discharge or indisputable evidence of their service before they may join the group. Anyone with a "smell of liquor on his breath or caught panhandling" is summarily discharged.

Practically all of his men are skilled workmen, Mr. Waters said. Among them are three lawyers, railroad men, mechanics, woodsmen, lumberjacks, building tradesmen and a few laborers. About 90 per cent of the men, he said, are married and have families, and have been living for more than a year on from $2.45 to $4 a week given them by the county in which they live.

Says Fight Not Finished.

Mr. Waters conferred with Representative Patman yesterday "to acquaint him with the character of the men in the Oregon group" and the representative gave him a letter to be read to the men this morning, saying the "fight for the bonus is not finished."

"I have ascertained that all the men are orderly, sober, and sincere," said Mr. Patman, adding, "Gen. Glassford deserves commendation for the great consideration shown to you."

The police head yesterday expended $120 of his own money to stock a commissary established at 465 C street northwest. He purchased food at Fort Myer and stocked the commissary with the following rations: 600 pounds of potatoes, 200 pounds of rice, 600 pounds of beans, 150 pounds of coffee, 200 pounds of sugar and quantities of canned milk, bread and soap.

Gen. Glassford announced last night that the following offers of food and services had been accepted:

The Southern Hotel Supply Co., 200 pounds of beef.

Diplomat Coffee Co., 7909 Georgia avenue, Silver Spring, Md., 100 pounds of coffee.

Bread has been donated by the following bakeries: Holmes Bakery, 107 F street northwest; Wonder Bakery, 2301 Georgia avenue northwest; Havener Bakery, 476 C street northwest; Dorsch Bakery, 641 S street northwest, R. E. Spitzberger, 2100 Rhode Island avenue northeast; Federal Bake Shop, 1006 F street northwest; University Bakery, 3234 Wisconsin avenue northwest; Rice Bakery, 709 Twelfth street southeast; Sunrise Bakery, 709 Twelfth street southeast; New Philadelphia Bakery, 1229 Morse street northeast; Connecticut Copperthite Pie Co.

Daily deliveries of bread will be made to the commissary established at 473 S street northwest.

Cash donations to date: $5, Mrs. A. B. Woodson, Washington Sanitarium, Takoma Park, Md.; $5, Police Capt. William G. Stott; $5, Gen. Glassford.

Lieut. Col. J. J. Staley, head of Marine Reserves, is organizing for sanitary and medical service. He will hold sick call daily for the visiting veterans, Gen. Glassford said.

RED TROOPS MARCH FOR ROYAL VISITOR

Viceroy of Hedjaz Shown Highest Pomp Since Fall of Czarist Regime.

Moscow, May 29 (A.P.).—The troops of Soviet Russia drew up to rigid salute to a royal visitor today, the second such personage to pay a state visit to the stronghold of communism since the czar was overthrown fourteen years ago.

The visitor was the Emir Feisal, viceroy of Hedjaz, and son of the all-powerful Ibn Sa'ud of Arabia.

Two of the highest officials of communism were sent to greet the princely tourist at the railway station, where a royal carpet was spread for him.

The welcome was the ceremonious kind preserved for personages of high rank, and apparently far outdid the reception accorded King Amanullah of Afghanistan four years ago.

In Native Costume.

Wearing a native costume, a flowing gold-braided tan robe and a burnoose, but the modern shoes of the West, the prince and his party were greeted by two vice commissars of foreign affairs, L. M. Karakhan and N. N. Krestinsky. Karakhan did the honors for the previous royal visitor.

The handsome, swarthy features of the prince were almost hidden by the hood of his burnoose as he walked from his train, accompanied by the commissars and high army officials. As he passed the saluting troops, nearby bands struck up the Hedjaz national anthem, and played it and the Internationale alternately.

The interior of the railway station was decorated in the colors of Hedjaz, and the carpet was spread indoors for the viceroy, or foreign minister.

On reaching the station plaza, the prince reviewed a battalion each of Soviet infantry and cavalry, which paraded in his honor.

Chief of Army Staff.

Accompanying the viceroy were four high officials including the chief of the army staff, who was dressed in a smart military uniform, the only member of the party not attired in Arabian robes.

The Arabian party traveled in a special car attached to the regular train from Warsaw, where the party had last visited in Europe. A Soviet foreign office and military detachment met the Arabians at the Polish-Russian border.

The visit of the viceroy officially was one of courtesy and good will for the country which first recognized the Kingdom of Hedjaz under Ibn Saud, and will last a week.

The prince was immediately taken to quarters in the official foreign office house, where M. Krestinsky was his host at a brilliant reception attended by the diplomatic corps and high Soviet officials.

Civilian Captures Cab-Theft Suspect

Driver of Allegedly Stolen Car Held for Police After Crash.

After a taxicab he had allegedly stolen crashed into two cars parked on Fifth street northwest, near Grant Circle, damaging them badly, Edwin G. Condon, of 469 I street northwest, was captured by a passerby yesterday morning and arrested by Tenth Precinct police on charges of driving while drunk, no operator's permit and unauthorized use of an automobile.

The cab was that of a large company operating here. It was in charge of Otto Johnson, of 307 Ninth street northwest. Johnson said he parked the machine near Sixth and G streets northwest and went into a restaurant. When he came out it was gone.

The accident occurred a short time after Johnson discovered the disappearance of the car. Condon was seized by J. J. Robertson, of 522 Randolph street northwest. The owners of the machines were attending services in St. Gabriel's Church, nearby.

Tombs Court Idle for One Day.

New York, May 29 (A.P.).—There were no cases in Tombs Court today, and that is news. Court attendants said it was the first time in their memory that Tombs Court had had no cases and Magistrate Erwin commended the citizens in the southern part of the city for their conduct over the holiday week-end.

SENATE LEADERS AND MILLS SUMMONED TO WHITE HOUSE

denied that they had discussed politics or prohibition with the President.

(Associated Press.)

Rival leaders in the momentous sales tax dispute in the Senate yesterday flung challenges for an immediate showdown, apparently assuring an early decision and prompt enactment of the revenue bill. The disputed levy seemed beaten as the opposition claimed a majority pledged to a petition against it and the proponents admitted it was a "close flight."

Forty-two members had signed the round robin petitions declaring against the sales tax substitute, and these circulating them confidently predicted 50 names—an absolute majority—would be enrolled by noon today.

Senator Harrison, of Mississippi, the Democratic tax leader, had 33 Democratic signatures. Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin, leader of the Republican independents in the tax controversy, had nine Republicans signed up.

Walsh Still Confident.

Senator Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, sponsor of the manufacturers' sales tax of 1.75 per cent proposed as a substitute for the various excise rates, made no claims but expressed confidence that a majority could be won by the time a vote is reached.

Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, who is favorable to the sales levy, said he was ready for a vote and insisted responsibility for any delay would rest on the opposition.

Senator Harrison also said he was ready for a vote and demanded it. He argued that the best way to speed the budget-balancing measure was to lay aside the disputed sales tax.

"Of course," Watson said, "if a majority signs the petition against the sales tax that ends it right there."

Meanwhile, looking about for the additional $56,000,000 which Secretary Mills says must be provided by the revenue measure, Senate sentiment was swinging yesterday to a further increase in the income tax rates along the lines proposed by Senator Connally (Democrat), Texas.

Eyes On White House.

Senate eyes are directed toward the White House with the sales tax controversy raging bitterly, but it appeared last night that President Hoover would keep hands off for a while, at least.

The Connally income tax schedule, once defeated by the Senate, provides for normal income rates of 4 per cent on the first $4,000 and 8 per cent above $4,000, with a surtax schedule graduating to 55 per cent on income in excess of $1,000,000.

The income schedule now in the bill provides normal rates of 3 per cent on the first $4,000, 6 per cent on the next $4,000 and 9 per cent on income over $8,000, with a maximum surtax of 45 per cent.

Defeat of the sales tax by the House is playing a big part in the Senate contest, opponents there contending it would be futile and a waste of time for the Senate to restore the levy to the bill in view of the House decision.

Senator Walsh in a statement said "No member of the Senate will be able to satisfy the demands of his constituency on this issue by telling them that he too favored the general excise tax amendment, but was constrained from supporting it because he did not want to delay balancing the budget; that he too was prepared to support a general manufacturers' excise tax but did not do so because the House had already rejected it."

"Congress has already taken six months in the writing of the tax bill," the Massachusetts senator added. "We are near the end now, in any event. Better to take three or more days now and settle the excise tax question than to settle it wrong on the plea of the necessity of haste."

He predicted the House would approve the sales tax if it is placed in the bill by the Senate.

WOODCOCK SPEAKS TO PRESBYTERIANS

Dry Chief Voices Hope of Courage to Maintain Prohibition.

Denver, May 29 (A.P.).—Questions ranging from those of a strictly secular complexion to matters of national import face leaders of opposing groups in the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., in the remaining three days of the 144th general assembly of the church.

Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, director of prohibition, drew the attention of the assembly today in a speech voicing the hope of the drys for courage to sustain the dry laws as an "adventure in self-denial." He outlined operations of the Prohibition Bureau.

The more prominent ministers occupied pulpits in various churches of the city, while other delegates pored over reports, proposed bills and overtures.

Issues Causing Conflict.

Briefly the issues leaders say will kindle conflict include: The report of the social and industrial relations committee with its consideration of compulsory unemployment insurance and "large-scale economic and social planning;" proposed severance of "financial and functional" relations with the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America; abolition of the church general council; recommended union with the United Presbyterian denominations and suggested changes in the section of the directory of worship regarding the solemnization of marriage.

The proposed changes in the marriage ceremony are not of a major nature, church leaders said, but many commissioners are opposed to any change.

Tells Dry Units Limitation.

Pointing out that the Bureau of Prohibition is limitied to detecting offenders against the dry laws and bringing them to court for punishment, Col. Woodcock said today:

"It might have been wiser to have allowed us to use the more persuasive methods of education as well.

"But you will see that our policy is to give the widest possible field to these influences, even if the bureau can not use them itself. Out theory is that temperance education has just as fair an opportunity as it ever had—if not better—and that there is just as great a need for it."

Federal prohibition agents, who are forbidden to use weapons except in self-defense, he said, are more limited than the usual law officer.

The net cost of the bureau last year was $4,234,282.44, or something less than 4 cents per capita, said Col. Woodcock.

Russell Boardman Wins Free-for-All

Lieut. Paul Gets Command of Army Entry in Balloon Race.

Omaha, Nebr., May 29 (A.P.).—Russell Boardman, transatlantic flier and coholder of the distance flight record, sped away from the field to win the free-for-all today in the air races which comes to a close tomorrow with the start of the annual national balloon race. Boardman's plane traveled an average of 182.36 miles an hour to take the 6-mile event.

Johnny Livingston, Aurora, Ill., leading prize winner thus far, added another event to his list in winning the manufacturers' race with Tex La Grone, of Kansas City, second, and Art Davis, of Lansing, Mich., third. Davis later won the 25 miles pony express contest.

Good air conditions were assured for the start of the balloon race late tomorrow afternoon, according to Capt. W. E. Kepner, Dayton, Ohio, the referee for the event. Six bags of 35,000 cubic feet capacity each are to compete. Announcement was made that Lieut. W. J. Paul, of Langley Field, Va., would be commander of the Army's No. 2 balloon. He was to have been aid to Lieut. R. R. Gillespie. Yesterday Gillespie was injured in an automobile accident in Illinois, en route here. Lieut. Paul's assistant will be J. D. Bishop, of Scott Field, Ill.

AMERICA COMPARED TO ROME IN HEYDAY

Presbyterian Leader Sees Lack of Religion as Cause of Crime.

Beaver, Pa., May 29 (A.P.).—Dr. Charles S. Cleland, of Philadelphia, moderator of the seventy-fourth general assembly of the United Presbyterian Church in North America, said in a sermon today that the application of the principles of Christ would do more than anything else to stop the wave of crime that is sweeping the Nation.

Speaking before ministers and laymen gathered for the general assembly, Dr. Cleland drew a parallel between the heydays of Rome and America and said religions is the avenue to the Nation's salvation.

Dr. F. G. Gamble, of Butler, delivered tonight's sermon. This afternoon a communion service was conducted by Dr. John A. Henderson, of St. Louis. Moses Shaw, of Chicago, secretary of young people's work of the denomination, directed a young people's rally tonight. He was assisted by a number of young pastors.

Tomorrow the general assembly will discuss the question of union with the Presbyterian Church of the United States. The matter is before the assembly, having been reported by the committee on bills and overtures, which received it from the committee on unity.

Three courses of action are open to the assembly on the question of unity. It may go on record for or against unity. It may continue the committee on unity for another year. It may vote to discontinue the committee on unity. The latter action would place the denomination on record as opposed to union. Sentiment among ministers and laymen alike tonight is that the assembly will continue the committee for another year.

Robsion Gets Verbal Lashing From Judge

Harlan, Ky., May 29 (A.P.).—Circuit Judge D. C. Jones today administered a verbal lashing to former Senator J. M. Robsion, defense counsel for 27 men facing charges of murder in connection with the Evarts battle, denying charges made by Robsion that ten-weeks' special term for the trial of the labor cases was a political move to prevent him from active campaigning in his congressional race.

The flare-up between Jones and Robsion came on the eve of the trials of miners and union officials for the slaying of two deputy sheriffs and a commissary clerk on May 5, 1931. The special term will open tomorrow morning with Judge T. B. McGregor on the bench, Judge Jones holding court in Bell County.

Reds Use Cats to Spread Doctrine.

Warsaw, Poland, May 29 (A.P.).—The police of Warsaw accused Communists today of using cats and dogs to spread their propaganda by tying handbills to the animals' necks, legs and tails. They said they had found scores of frightened animals, which had been treated thus, running through the streets and public gardens.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES McDONALD

Calm Reasoning Needed.

MY Dear Frances McDonald: Will you please help me to solve my problem. I have come to the conclusion that I shall have to decide just what road to travel on to save my reason and balance.

Nine years ago I married very much beneath me, although I was not fully aware of it at that time, to escape a terribly unhappy home. Of course I went from the frying pan into the fire. He is a real moron, and consequently can never hope to lift himself from the menial labor he must perform if he is to earn his way. However, I have never let myself go down to his level, but it has been a terrible struggle to stay up. I have never been seen in his company. In fact, I have not crossed the street with him in years. The consequences are, I am terribly lonesome. My life consists of going to work all day—home at 6 o'clock—get dinner, read paper—retire alone. I can not go places unescorted, and it would be very bad for my reputation to be seen in the company of any male friend. I can not have friends to my home as I am so ashamed of him and his friends I will not allow inside my door.

Oh, how I long to get away some place where I can come into my own. Mix with people and be judged according to what I am and not according to whom I married.

Would it be radical for me to take my child and go away to Florida or California and try to make a living for both of us? I have a few hundred saved, but that would not last long, and times are so bad just now, I may not be able to find work, or would it be mad extravagance for me to take a month's vacation, just to break the monotony of my existence?

He loves me and wants me to be a wife to him, come down to his level, be seen on the street with him, stay at home and have children and live a "normal, natural life." His appearance and reputation are so bad that it is asking me to make a tremendous sacrifice, but I have got to decide one way or the other. I have left him twice and each time he traced me through the gas company. He absolutely refuses to give me up. He hangs on to me and the child as a life saver and should he let go he would fall to the gutters. You may tell me to go about it in a legal manner. I have also done that, but in vain.

To sum it all up, shall I break down, give up all and become just a drunkard's wife and have children (which my heart yearns for) and give them nothing better in life than a drinking father, or shall I take my child and board the next boat for Florida, or California, and trust to fate or luck whether or not I shall get work and meet people of my own class and come into my own and maybe a chance to remarry and live happy ever after. He is a steady worker and I can always have a home, but at what a price.

CROSS-ROADS.

What you need is to sit down calmly and reason out your problem. At present you are not reasoning at all. In one breath you state the man is a moron of low grade and a drunkard and in the next you suggest having a family by him. You do not believe that you have the right thus to jeopardize the future of others do you? If this man is unfit to be seen with you, is he fit to father your children?

At present you are in such a condition mentally and spiritually that truly you are not equal to making any sort of decision. Your idea of flying from your problem reveals your tension. Calm down. Consider a few facts. For instance that life has gone on for centuries guided by some force. Relax. Your problem is as nothing compared to what some women have lived through since life began.

What you really want is a husband. What you really fear is that the one you have is the only one you can get. On that score we can reassure you, for any woman who has held the love of one man can always find another. But before you seek a second husband find serenity. Stop thrashing about and you will find harbor. But at present in your tumult you will go upon the rocks. So think calmly, act with reason and all will be well. Our suggestion is divorce.

WASHINGTON GIVEN CATHEDRAL TRIBUTE

National Masonic Ceremony Is Attended by Several Congress Members.

"When the frenzy of conflict has died away, and the fog of false issues has been dispelled by time, it is the character of our noble men which enshrines the holiest traditions of our civilization," said the Rev. Dr. Joseph Fort Newton, co-director of St. James' Church, Philadelphia, preaching at the national Masonic service in the great choir and sanctuary of the Washington Cathedral yesterday afternoon.

"The story of the race is best told and studied as a series of biographies, and we of this land need go no further than the Father of our Country for an illustration of that truth. The revolution was the work of the people, but Washington so incarnated its spirit, its struggle and its purpose that it almost seems to have been the work of one man. He was the one indispensable man, and had he fallen in battle, or been captured by his enemies, so far as human insight can see the revolution would have failed. If the ways of God could have been thwarted by hotspurs and madcaps in the field, or by the bickerings and intrigues behind the liner, our republic would never have seen the light. It was the granite-like strength, the giant-like endurance of Washington that saved the day and made the Nation possible.

Sees Washington Now Image.

"What a pity, then, that the greatest man of his generation, if not of his country, should have faded, as he seems well nigh to have done, into a cold marble statue in the hall of history, aloof, austere, impeccable, impassive, inscrutable. Today we look at his picture and see a great face indeed, but it is more like the Sphinx than a man, from which almost every flush of human life has faded, every human wrinkle ironed out. As a result, in spite of ourselves, he is half-hidden in a cloud of commonplaces, and we can pay him but a perfunctory homage, because a great human figure has been turned into a stiff and colorless image.

"Our first President loved the Masonic fraternity, having entered it before he was of age, at Fredericksburg Lodge, Virginia, in 1752, and in its fellowship he died, honored by his brethren for his character and his companionship. He knew that it is not a political party, but profoundly patriotic; not a church, yet it rests upon spiritual faith and moral principles; and he was not unaware of its extraordinary influence in shaping the life and freedom of our republic. He took his oath as President on a bible taken from a Masonic altar, and he was laid to rest at last with the simple rites of a great and ancient order whose fellowship he adorned. At one time it was proposed to form a united grand lodge of the United States, with Washington as the first general grand master, but it was not to be so. Masonic development having taken a different direction in America; but the Freemasonry of the republic united to erect at Alexandria the most imposing monument ever uplifted in honor of any mortal n.

"Of the religion of Washington a word ought to be added. He was neither an ideal churchman whom the eulogists describe, nor an indifferentist, if not unbeliever, as the iconoclasts would have us think. But he was religious in his own quiet way, accepting the realities of faith and revelation in the same matter of fact manner in which he accepted all other realities.

"It has been said that he seldom made his communion, on the ground that it was not fitting that a man of war should do so. If he was an infrequent communicant it was due, rather, some f us think, to the fact that he was neith r a poet nor a mystic, and so did not see the full meaning of that sublime sacrament.

Service to Race.

"In this respect he was like many other men in his day, and in our own. His real religion is to be found ot in a ceremony, but in the quality of his character, and in his high, disinterested service to his country and his race."

The service was held under the auspices of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission and was attended by several members of the House of Representatives and the Senate who are affiliated with Masonic organizations.

In addition delegations from the District of Columbia Masonic Lodges, Knights Templar, Kallipolis Grotto, Almas Shrine, Tall Cedars of Lebanon, and the Order of the Eastern Star attended. Members of the blue lodges, chapters and Order of the Eastern Star assembled on Wisconsin avenue near St. Albans Parish Church and marched through the cathedral foundation to the north transept entrance.

The Masonic members of Congress and other guests from the chancel were welcomed by Bishop Freeman.

Officers of the Masonic grand lodges of the District of Columbia and Maryland marched in the procession with the cathedral choir and clergy.

The large audience entered the cathedral through the south transept entrance and occupied seats behind the Masonic body.

Col. Goebel Weeps On Death of Riss

Injured Pacific Flier Says Mechanic Best Ever to Work on Plane.

McKinney, Tex., May 29 (A.P.).—Col. Art Goebel, noted aviator, injured in the wreck of his airplane here, wept when he learned today his mechanic, R. L. Riss, of Dallas, had been killed in the accident.

"I wish it had been me instead of him," Goebel said.

Goebel, who won the Dole flight derby from San Francisco to Honolulu, suffered the fracture of one leg and Riss was crushed to death when the plane was tossed by a gust of wind into a tree in an attempted take-off at the municipal airport yesterday. Because of his condition, Goebel was not informed immediately of Riss' death. He wired condolences to Riss' widow.

"Riss was the best mechanic who ever worked on an airplane," Goebel said. "I surely will miss him."

A physician from Dallas was expected in McKinley to treat Goebel. Hospital attaches said Goebel's condition was as well as could be expected. The plane powered by a Diesel type motor, had reached an altitude of about 35 feet and apparently was functioning perfectly when it struck the tree. It was demolished.

Hoover and Senators Feel Work to Be Fitting Today

Garner and Other House Members Also to Remain at Desks Through Memorial Day; Hurley to Attend Georgetown U. Rites for Slain Students.

(Associated Press.)

A harassed Senate and a busy Chief Executive feel that work today will be their most fitting observance of Memorial Day, but others, released from routine labor, were ready with tribute to the war dead.

A Senate session on Memorial Day is unusual, but the situation surrounding the important tax bill is unusual also. There were no complaints after leaders decided the most appropriate commemoration was to try to make some progress on the measure.

Keeping closely in touch with developments surrounding it, President Hoover left his schedule free of formal participation in exercises arranged today. Returning late yesterday from his camp in Virginia, he will probably spend most of today at his desk.

Mrs. Hoover, who preceded him to camp Saturday, remained behind, however, as did Mrs. Edgar Rickard, of New York.

The day of rest was welcomed by Cabinet and House members. Most of them had arranged to spend it quietly. Some of the former were out of the city.

One Cabinet member—Secretary Hurley—accepted an invitation to attend exercises at Georgetown University for students killed in the World War. At pre-Memorial Day observances yesterday Secretary Ray Lyman Wilbur spoke to thousands who gathered about the broad grounds surrounding Washington Monument.

Like some other House members, Speaker Garner expects to dispose of some office work that has been neglected. As usual, Mrs. Garner, his secretary for years, will help.

At Arlington today, the principal speaker will be former Senator James Reed, of Missouri, whom many regard as the Senate's premier orator during recent years. Another speaker will be Representative Sol Bloom, director of the Bicentennial commission.

The Masons plan services in their recently dedicated temple at Alexandria, and other organizations also had ceremonies scheduled.

storing public order and national confidence."

Much of Blame on Public.

Secretary Wilbur declared that "the local interests are so strong that many of our legislators have to play up their support of home and State interests to be elected."

"We can not blame them, for they are doing what we sadly enough have insisted upon their doing," he said.

The secretary placed much of the fault of the present economic structure on the public and charged them to "think in terms of the Nation today as the pioneers of the country did."

In commenting on the struggle and problems the people of this country have been forced to meet, he said:

"These battles of peace and of war have been costly. We have spilled out the blood of our youth for the benefit of the Nation. There is no honor too great for those who have been sacrificed for the benefit of the rest of us."

He made it plain to the audience that gratitude alone will not suffice.

Must Realize Responsibility.

"If we are to do our duty, we must realize our responsibility to carry forward the day-to-day program of our country," he declared.

He charged that "no government can be run on the memory of heroes, and that all must join in on the common duties of the people."

ALBERT SENDS NOTE ON DECORATION DAY

Tells Hoover of Belgium's Gratitude and Custom of Honoring U. S. Dead.

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover has received the following message from King Albert of Belgium:

"Ever faithful to a tradition which is dear to them, my compatriots will, on the thirtieth of May, strew flowers upon the graves of the American soldiers who sleep in Belgium soil. They will thus show how vividly they cherish in their hearts the memory of the brave comrades who fought by their side.

"On this solemn occasion, animated by a sentiment of sincere gratitude, we address to the American people our most heartfelt wishes for their welfare and prosperity. ALBERT."

President Hoover sent this reply:

"I have received your majesty's gracious message. The tribute which you and the Belgian people are paying on Decoration Day to the memory of those American soldiers and sailors who gave their lives for the cause of justice and whose bodies rest in Belgium, echoes and resounds in every American heart with gratitude and affection for their Belgian comrades and friends. I and my fellow countrymen in dedicating this day to our own dead will be keenly mindful of your own country's great sacrifice and will bend our heads in silent prayer for Belgium and Belgium's heroic dead. HERBERT HOOVER."

HENRY FORD
ON UNEMPLOYMENT

I HAVE always had to work, whether any one hired me or not. For the first forty years of my life, I was an employe. When not employed by others, I employed myself. I found very early that being out of hire was not necessarily being out of work. The first means that your employer has not found something for you to do; the second means that you are waiting until he does.

We nowadays think of work as something that others find for us to do, call us to do, and pay us to do. No doubt our industrial growth is largely responsible for that. We have accustomed men to think of work that way.

In my own case, I was able to find work for others as well as myself. Outside my family life, nothing has given me more satisfaction than to see jobs increase in number and in profit to the men who handle them. And beyond question, the jobs of the world today are more numerous and profitable in wages than they were even eighteen years ago.

But something entirely outside the workshops of the nation has affected this hired employment very seriously. The word "unemployment" has become one of the most dreadful words in the language. The condition itself has become the concern of every person in the country.

When this condition arrived, there were just three things to be done. The first, of course, was to maintain employment at the maximum by every means known to management. Employment—hire—was what the people were accustomed to; they preferred it; it was the immediate solution of the difficulty. In our plants we used every expedient to spread as much employment over as many employes as was possible. I don't believe in "make work"—the public pays for all unnecessary work—but there are times when the plight of others compels us to do the human thing even though it be but a makeshift; and I am obliged to admit that, like most manufacturers, we avoided layoffs by continuing work that good business judgment would have halted. All of our non-profit work was continued in full force and much of the shop work. There were always tens of thousands employed—the lowest point at Dearborn was 40,000—but there were always thousands unemployed or so meagerly employed, that the situation was far from desirable.

When all possible devices for providing employment have been used and fall short, there remains no alternative but self-help or charity.

I do not believe in routine charity. I think it a shameful thing that any man should have to stoop to take it, or give it. I do not include human helpfulness under the name of charity. My quarrel with charity is that it is neither helpful nor human. The charity of our cities is the most barbarous thing in our system, with the possible exception of our prisons. What we call charity is a modern substitute for being personally kind, personally concerned and personally involved in the work of helping others in difficulty. True charity is a much more costly effort than money-giving. Our donations too often purchase exemption from giving the only form of help that will drive the need for charity out of the land.

THE unemployed man is every one's concern, Henry Ford says—most of all the man's own concern. Being unemployed does not need to mean being out of work. There may be work even though one may not be hired to do it. Mr. Ford begins today a discussion of Employment, Charity and Self-Help as the three courses open to us in present conditions. He does not believe in routine charity because, he says, it is neither kind nor helpful. It does not get under the load or tackle the cause. He describes today a method he has followed. Wednesday he will discuss Self-Help.

Our own theory of helping people has been in operation for some years. We used to discuss it years ago—when no one could be persuaded to listen. Those who asked public attention to these matters were ridiculed by the very people who now call most loudly for some one to do something.

Our own work involves the usual emergency relief, hospitalization, adjustment of debt, with this addition—we help people to alter their affairs in common-sense accordance with changed conditions, and we have an understanding that all help received should be repaid in reasonable amounts in better times. Many families were not so badly off as they thought; they needed guidance in the management of their resources and opportunities. Human nature, of course, presented the usual problems. Relying on human sympathy many develop a spirit of professional indigence. But where co-operation is given, honest and self-respecting persons and families can usually be assisted to a condition which is much less distressing than they feared.

One of our responsibilities, voluntarily assumed—not because it was ours, but because there seemed to be no one else to assume it—was the care of a village of several hundred families whose condition was pretty low. Ordinarily a large welfare fund would have been needed to accomplish anything for these people. In this instance, we set the people at work cleaning up their homes and backyards, and then cleaning up the roads of their town, and then plowing up about 500 acres of vacant land around their houses. We abolished everything that savored of "handout" charity, opening instead a modern commissary where personal I O U's were accepted, and a garment-making school, and setting the cobblers and tailors of the community to work for their neighbors. We found the people heavily burdened with debt, and we acted informally as their agents in apportioning their income to straighten their affairs. Many families are now out of debt for the first time in years. There has appeared in this village not only a new spirit of confidence in life, but also a new sense of economic values, and an appreciation of economic independence which we feel will not soon be lost. None of these things could have been accomplished by paying out welfare funds after the orthodox manner. The only true charity for these people was somehow to get under their burdens with them and lend them the value of our experience to show them what can be done by people in their circumstances.

Our visiting staff in city work has personally handled thousands of cases in the manner above described. And while no one institution can shoulder all the burden, we feel that merely to mitigate present distress is not enough—we feel that thousands of families have been prepared for a better way of life when the wheels of activity begin turning again.

But there is still another way, a third way, so much better than the very best charitable endeavor that it simply forbids us to be satisfied with anything less. That is the way of self-help, which I shall discuss Wednesday in this publication.

EQUITABLE POSTAL RATES.

An important piece of legislation designed to put the Post Office Department on a business basis slipped through the Senate almost unnoticed on Friday along with the increased rates on first class mail. Senator Howell called attention to the fact that during the last seven or eight years the deficits in the Post Office Department have amounted to about $600,000,000. Such a record represents shameful neglect of postal problems by Congress. An effort to put the department on a business basis is welcome even though it is merely a rider to the tax bill.

Under Senator Howell's amendment the 3-cent postal rate for first class mail would remain in effect only one year. In the meantime the Interstate Commerce Commission would investigate the cost of carrying each class of mail and adjust rates so that each division of the postal service would be self-supporting. The commission would be given authority to change rates so that revenue could be kept equal to costs under all conditions on the same principle as railroad rates are now adjusted.

Under this arrangement Congress would have to appropriate directly from the Treasury for any subsidies it wished to afford air mail, ocean mail, or any other class. Subsidies would be brought into the open where the public could fully recognize them as such. Franking, too, would be curtailed. A special class of stamps would be provided for franked mail, and the Post Office Department would be permitted to count the franking stamps as revenue. In other words, the cost of franked mail would come directly from the Treasury instead of being counted in the postal deficit.

The Howell amendment is a bold move to introduce sound business methods into the postal system. There is no reason why the department should not be self-sustaining, or why it should not be managed according to sound business principles. It is to be expected that the Interstate Commerce Commission will take into consideration the privileges that are accorded first class mail in calculating the costs of handling each type of service. On that basis no class of mail users can complain at paying whatever rates are necessary to give the postal system a balanced budget.

THE MANCHURIAN MUDDLE.

If the League of Nations committee now in Manchuria is able to render a clear picture of the present situation and ultimate destiny of that vast troubled region it will do more than any other impartial observers have accomplished. Japanese troops are back again, fighting over the same ground they captured during the original occupation of the northern provinces. Opposition, not only to the Japanese, but to the Pu-Yi government set up by Japan, appears to be more intense and wide-spread than at first, when the intentions of the Japanese with regard to permanent domination were not so clearly understood.

The Manchuria campaign, with the side-issue at Shanghai, has been a costly one for Japan, not merely in the direct expense of her expeditionary forces, but in the severe curtailment of Chinese trade that has resulted from it. Manchuria is in such a state of disorder that only a fringe along the South Manchurian railway and areas immediately adjacent to the larger cities are enjoying anything like normal activity. Even the puppet government is reported to be taking itself somewhat seriously and raising objections to plans for wholesale colonization of Manchuria by Japanese farmers.

As many foresaw, however, the widely heralded project of relieving Japan's congested population by the migration of 500,000 colonists to Manchuria every year is not materializing. Disturbed conditions and the need of government funds for other uses have precluded a start this year, and it is now too late for farmers to prepare raw land for the short summer season in the north, and that is the only land available. The milder region in Southern Manchuria is already well settled, though even there the Japanese have never been able to compete with much success with Chinese and Koreans.

Those most familiar with conditions in the North, where the ambitious plans announced by the Japanese contemplated colonization of great areas of blizzard-swept plains, say such projects cannot be realized. There are three times as many Koreans in Manchuria as there are Japanese, and it is likely that the proportion will become even larger.

Japan has instituted a censorship regarding her plans for railway extensions and control, and, in fact, all information regarding transportation systems, including roads, motors and aircraft, and all matters pertaining to defense and customs questions. If the new state of Manchuhuo is taking over customs collections that were hypothecated by China for various foreign debts, new complications will be added by the refusal of other nations to extend recognition. Quite aside from active military operation and the danger of becoming seriously involved with Russia, Japan faces problems in Manchuria which threaten to make the whole adventure a total loss.

PATRIOTISM.

If social progress is painfully slow, the fault is not exclusively that of the inordinately conservative, selfish and backward individuals and nations. On the contrary, much of the blame attaches to reformers themselves, for it seems to be a law of life that to be devoted to the achievement of a great social change means to be a ruthless fanatic. Thus professional "liberals" are, in practice, narrow-minded, and the reddest radicals are simply inverted tories. Pacifists are more militant than their theoretical foes, and their propaganda is far more intolerant.

A recent illustration of this common phenomenon occurs in the case of Dr. William Burnlee Curry, an English educationist, headmaster at Darlington Hall, Totnes, Devonshire. Dr. Curry journeyed to the United States to lecture before the Child Study Club. In the course of his remarks he gave utterance to these opinions:

> Patriotism, as it is ordinarily understood, is a vice we ought to be ashamed of, but most of the schools of today are still teaching the doctrine of all the virtues being possessed by a group of people inhabiting a certain patch of the earth's surface.

It is difficult to be patient with such nonsense. In the first place, Dr. Curry confuses patriotism with chauvinism; love of country with unadulterated egotism and ignorance. If he were correct in his judgment filial love would be a sin and brotherliness a crime. The schools against which he complains have never taught that all the virtues are possessed by any one people. They could not be guilty of such distortion of fact without indicting themselves.

Civilization centers in our natural right to belong to the people among whom we are born; they receive, nourish, care for and protect us, and we return the compliment when the need arises and we have the power. Patriotism springs of decent and proper love for our own kind. The word is a synonym for father and indirectly for mother. The cause of universal peace is not to be advanced by people who are incompetent to appreciate patriotism. Dr. Curry might try Russia when next he goes on a lecture tour.

CHICAGO'S SECRET SIX.

The working agreement that was uncovered between the underworld and many of the civil authorities of Chicago has been characterized as the most corrupt alliance that ever cursed a city. The "syndicate", which was well provided with both brains and guns, became an invisible government. It levied its regular tax upon property, business and life itself, making various city officials its tools.

Organized crime preyed upon business until commercial associations finally were roused to action. Col. Randolph was made head of the group to which Capone referred when he said he had been licked by the Secret Six. That organization does not take credit for the Capone conviction, but it has achieved other results that are worthy of attention in this age of organized crime.

The secret group performs no police functions, but simply provides the regular officers of the law with information. The official staff of detectives, listed on the public payrolls, are well known to the underworld. It was found necessary to perfect a large secret organization that could run with the wolf pack and get information necessary to secure convictions and protect witnesses. This was found to be the only way in which Chicago gangsters could be brought to justice.

The Secret Six uses the services of the Scientific Crime Detection Laboratory of Northwestern University for assistance in the detection of forgeries, analysis of blood stains, identification of bullets, &c. Through use of the lie detector the most accomplished prevaricators have been caught. Many extra-legal means, such as dictaphones, spies and many forms of deception, have been found useful in fighting the ingenious methods of the crime world, yet the best sources of information are the gangsters themselves. Honor among thieves has been shown to be a fallacy from the number who sold out their companions.

With the assistance of the secret organization and better political administration much has been done to rid Chicago of its gangster rule. Capone is the biggest catch, but a long succession of minor convictions of public enemies is gradually ridding the city of its worst element.

EXECUTIVE BUDGET PLANS.

Gov. Ritchie advances the idea of an executive budget for the Federal Government, and announces his intention to press for a constitutional amendment putting it into effect. The success of the executive budget in Maryland adds emphasis to his view, yet it seems improbable that his plan will emerge from the academic stage.

In Maryland budget-making is a function of the governor. When the chief executive sends his budget to the legislature it must be balanced, and the lawmakers have no authority to unbalance it. Any item of expenditure may be reduced, but none may be increased and no new items can be added. Thus a definite check on extravagant expenditures is provided. After the budget bill has been disposed of, the legislature may authorize any expenditures that it desires, providing it also levies new or additional taxes to raise the necessary revenue, thus keeping the budget balanced.

Most of the extravagant legislation passed by Congress is outside of the budget. The common practice in Washington is to pass the regular appropriations bills that make up the budget and then to add other expenditures regardless of what the status of the Treasury may be. Last year, for example, Congress passed the so-called bonus legislation which called for the use of about $1,000,000,000 without even making an appropriation. The Treasury was left to secure the money the best way it could, after the reserve fund set up for redemption of the bonus certificates had been exhausted. It is this vicious practice that results in unbalanced budgets and that encourages reckless spending which is not felt by taxpayers until the money is gone.

Congress would never consent to restrict its fiscal powers as some of the State legislatures have done. It would doubtless be unwise to forbid Congress to increase expenditures proposed in the regular budget by the President. In a country of such wide and varied interests too much power should not be centered in one official. Furthermore, abuses arising from the increase of budget items are not extensive.

It is the second phase of the executive budget plan which is especially applicable to congressional expenditures. Making an exception for emergency defense measures, Congress ought not to authorize any expenditure not included in the budget, without providing some means of raising the necessary revenue. Every congressman who came forth with a pipedream for spending a few billions would then be under the necessity of devising new taxes of equal proportion. Once the delights of spending Government money were offset directly by the burden of higher taxes, extravagance would be suddenly curtailed.

No constitutional amendment would be needed to put such a policy into effect. It could be accomplished through the rules of both Houses. But unfortunately, the will to refrain from extravagance at the expense of future taxpayers would have to be present in Congress either to secure the adoption of such rules or to make them effective.

Farmers who would set the Philippines adrift in order to shut out competition would no doubt be glad to furnish the manpower later on to save the Philippines from being gobbled up by Japan.

A so-called "problem child" ran away from home. The neighbors and his family were not particularly keen on retrieving him, so they put the New Jersey police on his trail.

According to the verdict of a physicians' convention, there is no way to prevent snoring. But a hammer applied to the top of the head has been known to stop it.

Washington always tries to be hospitable, but when a locust swarm of bonus lobbyists descends upon the town the supply of hospitality may run short.

If it's revenue they want, why do beer advocates insist upon 2.75 slop instead of man-size beer? Who would pay a tax on counterfeit beer?

Amelia Earhart went shopping in Bond street, where American merchandise is sold in shops decorated with the slogan, "Buy British."

Some Democrats say they know how to balance the national budget, but they have shown no skill in balancing their own.

Jack Pershing says he doesn't advocate stringing up outlaws, but he knows just how the Western posses felt about it.

When Washington correspondents refer to "Congressional circles," they mean what Congress runs in nowadays.

THE POLISH CORRIDOR

From the Atlanta Constitution.

The gales of racial animosities are again blowing down the so-called Polish "corridor," for many years one of Europe's most troublesome and irritating problems.

Under the terms of the treaty of Versailles East and West Prussia were divided by the grant to Poland of a strip of territory stretching from her borders to Danzig on the Baltic Sea, and friction has since been constant.

The history of Danzig dates back to the times of historical obscurity. A town existed on the site as far back as the tenth century and since has grown steadily despite a varied and hectic political experience. In the twelfth century it was taken over by the Poles, only to fall into the hands of the Teutons in the fourteenth century. A century later the Polies again captured it, only to become again a German possession on the second partition of Poland in 1793.

From that date until 1918, when it was declared a "free city," it remained German. In order that Poland might have an outlet to the sea a strip of land through the heart of Prussia was granted to her by the conquerors of Germany.

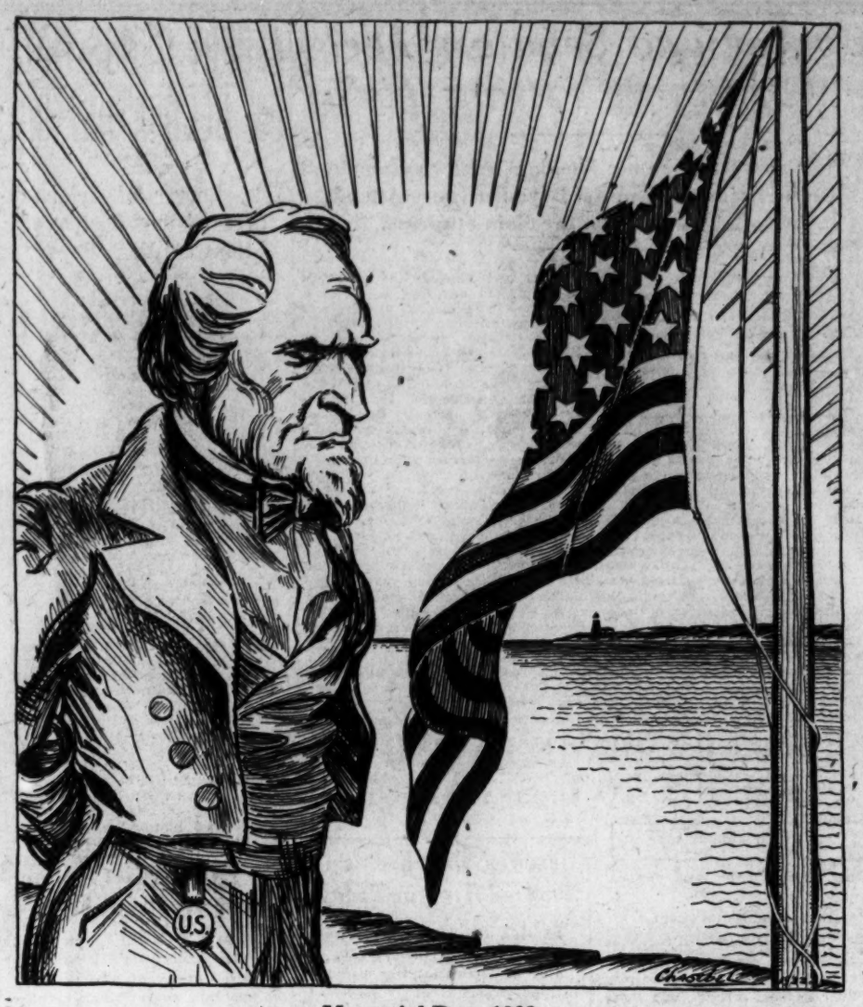
Germany feels that there can never be a safe foundation for peace in Europe so long as East Prussia, isolated by the Polish corridor from the mother country, is open to attack on all sides. Poland has the same fears for the corridor, exposed to German attack on both sides.

Whispering campaigns and disorders of various kinds are now going on and the territory and other European countries are being flooded with tons of written propaganda setting forth the German and Polish viewpoints.

It is not probable that there could be obtained from Poland an agreement to surrender her share of the spoils of war. Meanwhile, the fact remains that division of Prussia has brought about a situation under which international peace and amity and economic soundness is well-nigh impossible.

An analagous situation would exist if Tennessee, in order that it might have an outlet to the Atlantic, were to be given domination over a strip of land stretching from Chattanooga to Savannah, and if the latter city were taken away from Georgia and declared to be its own ruler. Certainly Georgia would be resentful and Tennessee would have difficulty in administering the territory.

It is certain that the political winds will blow hot and cold up and down the "corridor" for many years to come. What the final disposition will be of what has been called Europe's "sore thumb" is still in the laps of the gods.



Memorial Day, 1932.

POST HASTE.

Save a wreath for the sales tax and senatorial sanity.

The veterans are optimists. For every hundred visitors here to urge bonus payments, a million Americans have been demanding a balanced budget, and look!

Speaker Garner was not quite able to offer every unemployed man a postoffice to build, but he did his best.

We are strong for the buddies of '18, but they must realize that the world economic war of '32 has made a new crop of veterans that includes the entire population and no special favors can be granted this year.

Interest in Mayor Walker's fate is almost overshadowed by speculation as to what Gov. Roosevelt's action will be if the mayor's removal is recommended, what Tammany will do to the governor if he does remove him, and what it will do to presidential aspirations if he doesn't.

Virtually all the Louisiana delegates to the Democratic convention are regarded as "Long men." Would you have believed there were so many more at home like him?

Brig. Gen. Glassford would have less concern about handling his bonus brigade if his authority over them were a little less indefinite.

One leader of the veterans announces that they will remain in Washington until favorable action is taken by Congress on the bonus. If others interested in legislation adopt similar tactics, the Capital is destined to become the Nation's metropolis very soon.

Those New York Yankees, like the Wall street bears, appear to be somewhat cowed by Washington.

Speaker Garner had some difficulty with his contention that a distribution of fresh meat at this time is any more justifiable than dipping into the salt pork barrel.

It will be a pity if any of the handsome adjectives applied to Senator Jim Ham Lewis must permanently be displaced by "irascible and captious."

Continuous reiteration that Congress means all right, that it will balance the budget eventually and that no wild inflation is really intended, has so far prevented absolute collapse at home, but Europeans are not convinced, as the withdrawal of $100,000,000 in gold in ten days testifies.

Senator Swanson is catching it from Virginia women because he will not take the trouble, when he is right there in Geneva, to make the League of Nations give women equal rights.

Pat Harrison's activity in opposing the sales tax would indicate that he aspires to the stature of a senatorial LaGuardia. PAUL HUDSON.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

MEMORIAL DAY.

We, who count our trivial losses,
Come to wreathe the weathered crosses.

We, who should the faith be keeping,
Stand where all the brave are sleeping,

And with pretty song and story
Tell the warrior's fame and glory.

Where they lie in gallant numbers;
Where the unknown soldier slumbers

Under marble, cold and lonely,
For a few brief moments, only

Bare of head, our tribute paying,
We now stand while bands are playing!

Once a year in memory of them
We shall place a flower above them,

Then return to doleful sighing,
Just because the times are trying.

Drop the wreath and stop the singing,
Better tribute we'd be bringing

If through days by doubt invaded
We'd but hold the faith as they did.

Radical Treatment Won't Cure Rheumatism If There Are Bad Teeth

By ROBERT QUILLEN

In time of emergency or unusual hardship, people are prone to believe that the difficulties and trials of the moment are permanent.

Believing this, they advocate remedies that are drastic and revolutionary—remedies that might be necessary if present conditions really were permanent, but are far more radical than necessary to cure a temporary affliction.

It may be necessary to amputate the patient's arm if the sore on his hand is a cancer, but only those who have lost their wits will advocate such a course if the affliction is a simple boil that needs nothing more than lancing.

There has been no fundamental change in America. Problems of the moment are age-old problems, made more acute by an orgy of gambling and waste.

Any cure attempted should be directed at fundamental disorders, not at symptoms that are acute and temporary.

What is wrong that can be mended, and what remedy can be applied?

Three things, at least, we know.

First, public opinion—dread of what people will say—is the greatest force of right and decency. But when men gain great power, like that conferred by wealth, they feel independent of public opinion. They scorn the laws of God and men and make their own. They can destroy justice, freedom and honest government.

Second, habitual criminals are men who do not work for a living. The ability to live without toil makes them scornful of the duty-bound world and its laws; and their easy prosperity, without visible means of support, is almost invariably a proof of dishonest practices.

Third, the ordinary man asks nothing of the world but freedom and a living. Give him a decent income, honestly come by, and he cares little for doctrines, isms, crusades or forms of government.

These things being true, those who would cure the Nation's faults need look no further for a remedy.

Curb wealth to keep it humble and mortal; jail those who refuse to work for their bread; and give every man a job at a wage that will provide self-respect, security and comfort.

When these things are done, few problems will remain; until they are done, no stop-gap plan can do more than store up trouble for a day of reckoning.

PRO AND CON

Press Comment Upon Acts and Actors in the Great American Show, "Politics."

The Strong, Silent Candidate.

Brooklyn Eagle.

Newton D. Baker evidently believes that silence is still on a golden basis and is determined not to depreciate its value.

He delivered a splendid address before a group of lawyers, but the only political allusion made by him was the suggestion that his hearers could not do better than to follow the leadership of President Hoover just now.

Mr. Borah a Born Dissenter.

Kansas City Times.

Senator Borah will not attend the Republican national convention, and it is believed his frequent disagreement with the administration has much to do with his decision to keep away. As Mr. Borah is advancing no explanation on his own account, one guess may be as good as another. One fact is established. Mr. Borah holds to his own opinions and convictions, and disagrees by instinct.

As a vigorous campaigner for Mr. Hoover four years ago, Mr. Borah was challenged on his previous record of vigorous opposition to certain of Mr. Hoover's policies. His answer was frank. He had never agreed with any man on everything, and never expected the day to come when he would find that possible. And the country can agree to admire Mr. Borah for his sincerity. Where would it be without the sound of his powerful minority voice, anyway?

A Woman's Righteous Anger.

Cincinnati Enquirer.

Thomas L. Blanton, loud-speaking representative from Texas, was put in his place Monday by an angry woman, and the Congress will not soon forget it. Mrs. Mary T. Norton, of Massachusetts, is perhaps the ablest woman legislator in the Congress. Thwarted at every turn in her program of legislation for the District of Columbia, Mrs. Norton showed up the old-fashioned, petty politics of Blanton in a true light.

Congress as a Luxury.

Kansas City Times.

Mussolini has told American visitors that the United States is so overflowing with wealth and natural resources that it can afford the luxury of a government by congress. Italy, he has said, is too poor. A parliament would ruin it.

The events of the last two months in Washington have given force to his words. At a time when the country needed first of all to get the inflated cost of government down, Congress wrecked the proposals for economy. When a well considered system of taxation was imperative, the House yielded to demagogic appeals to pile up taxes on business in a way to impede economic recovery. When a reduction of expenditures was vital, Congress sent shivers through the business world by proposals to make lavish appropriations to plunge the country more heavily in debt.

Last March, after the Government under the President's leadership had mobilized the Nation's resources to ease the strain on the credit structure so business could go forward, Congress went wild and produced such uncertainty that business was forced to mark time.

Now under pressure of an aroused public opinion the group of substantial congressmen who have kept their heads and put the national welfare first is beginning to get the situation in hand. But public confidence has been so shaken that the one hope of the country now is that Congress will cut expenses, adopt a tax bill that will balance the budget, and then go home.

Mere Noise.

Los Angeles Times.

If we had an antinoise campaign against the chatter of the wets it might help. In the old days they were noisier still, but with a difference.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Japanese Correspondent Suggests That Kellogg Pact Does Not Set Up Bar Against Changing Conditions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It has been contended in quarters identified with the formation of public opinion that the Kellogg pact represents a line of demarcation for the affairs of nations; that it enunciates a new type of diplomatic horticulture that is not rooted in the past; and that Japan can not explain away her recent actions in the Far East by banking upon parallels in the past policies of other nations.

Granted that the men of the street gleefully face this music, prudence directs one to recall that the Senate committee on foreign relations, anent the pact, reported: "Each nation is free at all times, and regardless of the treaty provisions, to defend itself, and is the sole judge of what constitutes the right of self-defense and the necessity and the extent of the same. The United States regards the Monroe Doctrine as a part of its national security and defense. Under the right of self-defense allowed by the treaty must necessarily be included the right to maintain the Monroe Doctrine, which is a part of our system of national defense."

No armies or navies dare bring their guns into action without pleading self-defense.

Meanwhile, Sir Austen Chamberlain addressed his note to the American Government: "There are certain regions of the world the integrity of which constitutes a special and vital interest for our peace and safety. The British government have been at pains to make it clear in the past that interferences with those regions can not be suffered. Their protection against attack is to the British Empire a measure of self-defense. It must be clearly understood that the British government accept the new treaty under the distinct understanding that it does not prejudice their freedom of action in this respect. The United States Government has comparable interests, any disregard of which by a foreign power they have declared that they would regard as an unfriendly act. The British government believe, therefore, that in defining their position they are expressing the intention and the meaning of the United States Government."

Reverting to the matter of the line of demarcation, it appears that a goodly number of international instruments were sanctimoniously harped upon as constituting such lines and fell short of their stanch endurance.

The Westphalia treaty set France far and away west of the Rhine. The treaty was then hailed as a line of demarcation in the New World order. That was not to be.

In the Congress of Vienna their graces and excellencies divided the map of Europe according as the interests of half a dozen dynasties dictated. They promised each other that they would remain united "by the bonds of a true and indissoluble fraternity, and considering each other as fellow countrymen they would on all occasions and in all places lend each other aid and assistance." The Holy Alliance was considered a line of demarcation. That was not to be. Without the Holy Alliance, the Monroe Doctrine would have been proclaimed in a different form.

The treaty of Berlin of 1878 also claimed the distinction of being a line of demarcation in the course of human events. That was not to be. The treaty taught that the wages of sin is happiness. An armed peace, armed to the teeth, was maintained for 36 years until the smoldering embers flamed into a world conflagration.

Gone is Metternich; so is Disraeli. It appeals to rational imagination that the famous line of demarcation be shifted as decades roll by.

YUJI YAMAZAKI.

Reader Applies Congressional Logic to Problem of Married Women in Government Service.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There appeared in The Post May 23 an article entitled "Leeches in Congress," a part of which is as follows:

"The mere employment of a relative, however, is not the question in which the public is interested. • • • Legitimate criticism applies only to those cases where relatives are given salaries as employes of Congress without rendering service therefor."

This same defense may be advanced in the cases of married persons in the executive branch of the Government, for the great majority of these women have worked diligently, many of them more than earning their salaries. They qualified by competitive examinations and received their appointments on qualifications; they have held their positions by competition in the form of efficient service. The public interest is jeopardized no more by their continuance in the Government service than by the continuance of efficient active relatives of members of Congress. Surely no one will contend that the wife or sister of a member of Congress is any less efficient because of that relationship.

In 1883 the civil service act was passed by Congress which prohibited appointments of persons where two or more of their immediate family were already in the Federal service. This law was enacted almost 50 years ago to prevent nepotism in the executive branch of the Government. However, the present attack on married persons does not seem to be based on nepotism; the mere employment of two members of a family is not the question in which the supporters of this move to dismiss one of two married persons from the Government service are interested. It would be very interesting to know just what it is. S. W. S.

Radio Dial Flashes

By ROBERT D. HEINL

THE gallant remaining remnant of the Grand Army of the Republic will pay tribute to departed comrades in Memorial Day ceremonies today in Arlington Amphitheater, which will be heard throughout the country.

The principal speaker on the program which will be broadcast over WRC at 1:30 p. m. will be former United States Senator James A. Reed of Missouri.

The solemn Memorial Day services which will take place near the tomb of the Unknown Soldier will open with "Assembly" by a Marine bugler, followed by an overture by the Marine band. William F. Dorsey, department commander of the G. A. R., will then call the assembly to order, after being introduced by James G. Yaden, presiding officer.

Next will come presentation of the colors by Percy Parker, an invocation by the Rev. V. O. Anderson, followed by "The Star Spangled Banner," sung by Jeanette McCaffery, accompanied by the Marine Band.

Gen. Logan's order establishing Memorial Day will be read by Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker, his daughter, after which Dorothy Sherman Pierson will sing "Just Before the Battle, Mother," accompanied by the Marine Band. Lincoln's Gettysburg address will be read by Harlan Wood, and Gertrude Lyons will then sing "Out of the Night the Bugle Blows."

Representative Sol Bloom will deliver an address, Elsie Joras Reilley will sing "There Is No Death," and then former Senator Reed will speak. The program will close with the singing of recessional by Ruby Smith Stahl, "America" by the audience, and benediction.

A GIGANTIC military field mass, to be held in the stadium of the Catholic University, and celebrated by the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and chancellor of the university, before 30,000 Catholics from the Archdiocese of Baltimore, will be heard over WMAL from 11 a. m. until noon today.

The mass will be an official part of the program for 1932 of the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission, and as such will be Catholic America's tribute to the Father of His Country.

The running of the historic Suburban Handicap will be described by Clem McCarthy and Jimmy Wallington for WRC listeners, beginning at 3 p. m. this afternoon. Thomas B. George will be at the microphone for WMAL, from 2:30 p. m. on.

The same announcers will describe the Belmont Stakes next Saturday afternoon, while WRC has scheduled an account of the English Derby at Epsom Downs over the WJZ network at 8:45 a. m. on Wednesday. R. C. Lyle, English sports commentator, will be at the mocrophone during the Derby.

IN honor of the Indianapolis Speedway races the automobile classic which takes place annually on Memorial Day, tribute will be paid to Indiana when the Parade of the States program is broadcast tonight (WRC, 8:30 o'clock).

Theodore Dreiser, novelist, who is a brother of Paul Dresser, the Indiana composer, was really responsible for the words of Dresser's famous "On the Banks of the Wabash," which will be featured on this hour.

According to Dreiser, he and Paul were sitting together in their home in Terre Haute one evening back in 1896 when Paul asked him what he thought would make a good song.

"Why don't you write about a city or a State or even a river," Theodore said. "You might make one about your own Wabash."

Paul seized upon the idea, asking Theodore to submit some words for a verse and chorus. He did. Paul improvised the music and from this hastily constructed form resulted the song, which for many years has been one of the most popular in America, in addition to being the Indiana State song.

The "Prologue" of Leoncavello's "Pagliacci" will be sung by Lawrence Tibbett in concluding the Voice of Firestone program tonight (WRC 7:30 o'clock). Tibbett also will sing "The Cuban Love Song," "De Glory Road," and "Absent," by Metcalf. He will be accompanied by William Merrigan Daly's Orchestra.

"The Manufacturers Sales Tax" is the subject Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, will discuss during the National Radio Forum tonight (WRC, 9 o'clock).

TWO important orchestral works will be heard for the first time on the air during tomorrow's Musical Americana broadcast (WMAL, 2:30 p. m.). The first selection will be "Burmese Play," a composition by Henry Eichheim, prominent American composer, to be played by Howard Barlow's Symphony Orchestra. The suite, based on original Burmese themes and written for typical Burmese instruments, was first presented at the Neighborhood Playhouse in 1925 by Barlow, when he was conductor of the orchestra there.

The second selection on the program will be the "Theme and Fantastic Variations" by Nicolai Berezowsky, one of the prize winners on the recent radio composition contest. The composition, written for string quartet, piano and clarinet, will be conducted by Berezowsky himself.

Patrick J. Hurley, Secretary of War, speaking under the auspices of the national Republican party, will be heard over WRC at 9 p. m. during the Lucky Strike Dance Hour. Ted Flority and his orchestra, playing from San Francisco, will furnish the musical program.

Johnny Weissmuller, who is making personal appearances at the Fox Theater this week, will do his only local radio broadcasting from the studios of Station WRC, beginning at 10:15 o'clock tonight. Mr. Weissmuller will be accompanied to the microphone by Phil Lampkin, conductor of the Fox orchestra, during the Norge Fox Radio Review.

THE great bell on the Castle of Rovereto, in Rome, known as the Bell of the Fallen Heroes, will be heard in the United States today when it will peal 100 times, in memory of soldiers fallen in the World War. Its notes will be short-waved to the WJZ network at 2:30 p. m. today. • • • Ceremonies at the dedication of the Hall of Science of the Chicago Century of Progress Exposition buildings, will be broadcast over the WJZ network at 3 p. m. on Wednesday afternoon. • • • "Hollywood Whispers," formerly presented over WMAL on Saturdays, has been shifted to Mondays, beginning tonight, 9:15 o'clock. • • • The Boswell Sisters, featured on "Music That Satisfies," will be heard a half-hour earlier, beginning tonight (WMAL, 9 p. m.). • • • Morton Downey, despite rumors he would take a long vacation from radio, is inaugurating a new series of sustaining programs that will bring his song recitals to WMAL listeners every Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 6 p. m., beginning tonight. He will be accompanied by Freddie Rich's music. • • • A national spelling bee will be relayed over WMAL tomorrow afternoon.

AMONG NBC entertainers with thirteen letters in their names are Freemon Gosden (Amos); Eugene Carroll (Gene, of Gene and Glenn); Phillips H. Lord (Seth Parker); Raymond Knight, the comedian; Charles Kenney (Bonnie Laddies); H. Warden Wilson, "the ghost announcer;" Grantland Rice, sports authority, and Frank Singiser (Col. Goodbody).

Interpreting the Mode

By DARE

Brown woolen street frock with striped gilet and smartly buttoned-on scarf. (Courtesy of Maggy Rouff, Paris.)

NEW YORK, May 29.—"Oh, whaddya care what's new!"

That's right. What do you care—what's new in the style industry? In fashions—in what this and that woman who has ton-n-n-n-s of money wears? All you care about is what you wear—or wish you could wear, or haven't to wear!

Well, before you throw this Fashun Collom down in utter disgust let me whisper something into yer-years. You don't have to care what other women wear! You don't have to care what Dame Fashion says is pew and stylish. All you actually have to care about is what you wear yourself. 'Course, you have to wear something. And it's as easy to care about what that something is as to try to pay no attention to it! That's what I thought we would discuss today, anyhow.

Let's start with scratch—meaning yourself. You have eyes, hair and skin, and some sort of a chassis. All right. Colors and lines are your consideration. The colors that do their best for your eyes, hair and skin. And the lines that do their best for your figure. Then we can go on to the second lesson, which is—what colors and lines can be worn at certain times of the day?

Remember, all you really have to care about is what colors are becoming to you—not whether they are stylish or not! And if these colors happen to be modish—or if, as actually happens, the turn of the style wheel happens to throw up an odd color that is becoming to you and call it modish, one that you haven't thought of before as becoming—why, you are in luck! Further, if this color is appropriate to certain times or occasions, why, wear it. Yellow, for instance. You might be ravishing in yellow—Dame Fashion says it is one of the stylish colors—very well—wear it. But wear it where it is appropriate. Say for sportswear, for boudoir wear, for evening. Don't wear a yellow outfit to a tea, just because it is a stylish color, and because it is becoming to you I pray! That's the time and place of style, you see?

Don't care what is new, what is stylish. That is, more than superficially, but do care what is becoming to you.

• • • •

Vacation time is clever finger time. Long afternoon on sand or veranda can be as well spent in clever finger work as in idling—getting all the benefit there might be from quiet and sun, rest and a different environment. And getting something else besides—the tranquillity that comes with finger work, as well as the relaxation that comes with the contemplation of something well done, something you have created—made yourself.

Better send your stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for this week's illustrated leaflet which tells you how to make any number of lovely boudoir dolls—and take the leaflet with you on your vacation. The end of vacation will see your Christmas box simply filled with the most loveliest gifts you ever gave—and a few exotic and lovely dolls left over for your own use, perhaps.

• • • •

Simple as all that—but as lovely. Maggy Rouff, of Paris, designed the street ensemble I sketched for you today—making it in brown wool and adding an odd gilet on striped fabric in many colors. Then one would button on the scarf, for chic—'Nif one wore the scarf over an arm, the buttons of the frock would just go on being where and as they were. Nice?

• • • •

And, oh yes. Almost forgot the odd cape button arrangement—just another cape—but this time with a personality. That's in the little sketch.

Au revoir.

What Today Means

By MARY BLAKE

"GEMINI"

IF May 30 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:10 a. m. to 10 a. m., from noon to 1:15 p. m., and from 7:30 p. m. to 9 p. m. The danger periods are from 6 a. m. to 7:45 a. m., and from 3:30 p. m. to 5 p. m.

An inundation of unexpected demands upon your strength and time on May 30 will hinder the progress of your usual tasks and upset scheduled plans for the week. Mrs. Grundy will be unusually busy slaying victims among the young married set; those who have been playing with fire are in for some bad burns, unless more caution is displayed.

The child born on this May 30 will be a rather weak-willed, submissive little being, and will greatly reflect both parental and school influences during later life. It will be refined and quiet, and will not choose rowdy companions. Whether an indifferent or a prize scholar will depend a great deal upon its teachers—it will need to be drawn out and encouraged.

Born on May 30 you are a close-tongued, cautious, and an ultraconservative being. You have the unemotional person's wisdom of silence and lack of display. Your quiet obstinacy is difficult to combat, as you go your own way oblivious of the would-be desires of others. Your honesty and integrity are recognized by one and all, but your nature seems untouched by the warm fires of personal magnetism. The world may expect more justice than mercy from those of your type.

You have a great capacity for hard work, and the ability to carry out dreary forms of drudgery without complaint. You would give your last ounce of strength rather than quit a thing begun or accept defeat. You are frank and fearless, but are not diplomatic. You have an average type human mind, and you know how to use it to attain what you want out of life. You could never be original, but you are capable of doing very excellent work in some established field.

There is some morbidness in your nature, and you allow yourself to brood over disappointments and to harbor feelings of resentment. You never forget or forgive a vital wound. Although you do not possess many of the endearing and softer qualities that attract people to others, you possess other characteristics which make you a good and loyal friend.

Culbertson on Bridge

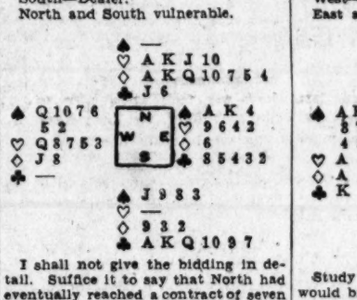
FINDING A CHINK IN THE ARMOR.

"IF I knew what to lead," one of the strongest of New York's younger experts remarked the other day, "I would be the greatest Bridge player in the world."

The statement, while perhaps overbroad, contains a very large element of truth. The choice of the Opening lead is frequently vital from a defensive standpoint, and even the bidding does not always furnish a correct clew, although there, if anywhere, the information that will guide the player is to be found. Some players base all their leads on convention. Some players rely wholly on hunches. Some players lead in a hit-or-miss fashion, one time relying upon convention and another upon inspiration. And there are some who know nothing about either convention or inspiration, and those wholly disregard both.

Today's story centers around a Grand Slam bid on a hand in a rubber game at the Cavendish Club in New York. The North and South players were two of New York's ranking players, while seated East was Mr. George Olsen. The identity of his partner is unimportant, as he played a minor role in the drama which North and South considered a tragedy, while Mr. Olsen and his partner, realizing how narrowly they had averted the snapping of the trap of destiny, did not find words to describe it.

The hand was:
South—Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.



I shall not give the bidding in detail. Suffice it to say that North had eventually reached a contract of seven diamonds, after West had made a bid of spades and North had shown control of that suit.

Mr. Olsen was charged with the responsibility of leading. Most players, for lack of something better, would have laid down the King of spades, and then waited for the ax to fall. Mr. Olsen believed differently, and led a club, which South had bid and rebid. His partner, void of clubs, trumped, and thus set the grand slam contract one trick.

As the score was being recorded, North ruefully inquired:

"And why did you lead a club?"

"Well," Mr. Olson replied, "both of you seemed to like the clubs pretty well and my partner had bid spades. When you went to a grand slam, I knew you could have no spades to lose. I had a lot of clubs, and I knew South had a lot of clubs, too, because he had bid them three times; maybe my partner had none. So I thought the chance was worth taking."

The reasoning was sound, and the result paid a rich reward for a carefully considered defensive play.

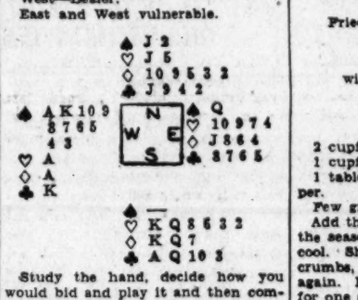
TODAY'S POINTER.

The choice of an opening lead often presents unusual difficulties. Frequently the selection made is the determinnig factor in the success or failure of the contract. Opening leads should therefore be selected with great care and deductions made from the information given in the bidding.

TOMORROW'S HAND.

The bidding and play of the hand printed below will be discussed tomorrow:

West—Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.



Study the hand, decide how you would bid and play it and then compare the results you obtain with those shown in tomorrow's article.

How to Be Beautiful

By ELSIE PIERCE

Brittle Hair, Split Ends Make Perfect Permanent Impossible.

FOUR out of five. You've heard that before, but not in connection with permanent waves. Four out of five women today are having their hair permanent waved. And why not? When a permanent adds so much—helps to frame the face with a flattering coiffure, with soft lusterful waves that look for all the world as though Nature herself put them there.

Elsie Pierce.

Now that summer and the swimming season is near, more and more women are "considering" a permanent wave, and there are any number of questions on the type of permanent to have, how long it should take, how long the wave will last. There are any number of splendid methods of permanent waving, perfected methods that have proved their value in years of actual service and thousands of satisfactory waves. The success of a permanent depends very largely on the skill of the operator. The length of the time the wave should take varies somewhat, depending on the texture of the hair and the heat required—usually about two or three hours. The life of the wave depends upon the method, the operator, the success of the wave and the individual.

There is one question which I am very frequently asked: "My hair is brittle, or the ends are splitting, and I want to have a permanent—what shall I do?"

Invariably my answer is, "Condition your hair first and your permanent will be the more successful for this preliminary care."

Treating Split Ends.

Many hairdressing salons offer singeing treatments for split ends. Just how helpful this actually is I have not been able to determine. At any rate, an expert should give this treatment. It is not to be undertaken at home.

Cutting the hair a quarter of an inch above the breaking point is a good way to get rid of split ends. This followed by periodic hot oil treatments and daily brushing to stimulate the circulation through the scalp, nourish the hair roots and distribute the oil evenly through the hair to the very ends is the best way to overcome the tendency to split ends. Weekly hot oil treatments, scalp massage and daily brushing will also help to nourish brittle hair. Since most permanent waving methods tend to dry the hair somewhat it is important to overcome any tendency to dryness before indulging in a permanent.

When hair is in good condition and scalp normal and healthy, a perfect permanent is to be expected.

And now, a warning about caring for scalp and hair after the permanent. Most women feel that the permanent is the panacea for all hair evils. It is not. The hair requires just as much brushing to keep it lustrous, just as much scalp massage to keep the roots nourished, just as much shampooing to keep the hair clean as it did before the permanent. When women complain "since my permanent, my hair is so "dull" I immediately cross-examine them to find out how much care the hair has received. Don't always blame the permanent!

My hair bulletins are yours for the asking and the brushing, shampooing and massage directions apply before and after the permanent. If you want hair health and beauty, send for them, and follow the instructions given. Don't forget the self-addressed, stamped envelope.

The Homemaker

HAM BALLS, FRIED NOODLES WITH CROUTONS.

THIS being a holiday, it is highly probable that many of us are off a-picnicking with no need of a dinner menu for tonight and our picnic helps, as you know, were cared for last week. This leaves us just tomorrow's dinner to plan for and the plan is ham balls, of picnic ham left over on the larder shelf. And do you sometimes prepare fried noodles, or have you heard of them? If not, they are worth trying, and if you already know them, let's have 'em for tomorrow with the ham!

TUESDAY'S DINNER.

Ham Balls
Fried Noodles with Croutons
Cabbage a la Dudley
Sponge Cake Boxes
with Hot Chocolate Sauce
Coffee

Ham Balls.

2 cupfuls cold cooked minced ham
1 cupful thick white sauce
1 tablespoonful minced green pepper.
Few grains cayenne.

Add the sauce to the ham, then add the seasonings. Spread on a plate to cool. Shape into small balls. Dip in crumbs, egg and then in crumbs again. Fry in deep fat at 380 degrees for one and one-half minutes. Drain on absorbent paper and serve garnished with parsley.

Cabbage a la Dudley.

1 small head cabbage
1 onion, sliced
3 tablespoonfuls butter
2 cupfuls water
2 tablespoonfuls flour
2 tablespoonfuls cracker crumbs.
½ teaspoonful Worcestershire sauce.
Salt, pepper and paprika to taste.

Fry the sliced onion in the butter until light brown, then add the flour, water and seasoning. Cut up the cabbage and pour the mixture over it. Cook slowly until tender and then remove to baking dish. Pour over it a half teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce, sprinkle top with bread crumbs and dot with small pieces of butter. Put into a hot oven, about 450 degrees, until crumbs are a golden brown.

Sponge Cake.

2 egg yolks.
1 cupful sugar.
Pinch of salt.
Whites of 3 eggs.
1 tablespoonful hot water.
1 cupful flour.
2 teaspoonfuls vinegar.
1¾ teaspoonfuls baking powder.

Beat the yolks of the eggs until they are thick and light yellow. Add the sugar slowly and continue the beating. Next add the water (still beating) and the flour mixed and sifted with the other dry materials. Add the whites of the eggs beaten stiff and then the vinegar. Beat all together well and bake in a moderate oven approximately 35 minutes.

Sponge Cake Boxes.

Cut sponge cake in three-inch squares and remove centers, leaving an edge around the cake. Cut marshmallows into small pieces, fill the cavity with them and sprinkle generously with broken walnut meats. Pour over this the following sauce:

Hot Chocolate Sauce.

Melt one square of unsweetened chocolate in a saucepan. Add to it one and one-half tablespoonfuls of butter and mix thoroughly. Add gradually a third of a cupful of boiling water and a cupful of granulated sugar. Bring to a boil and cook not more than fifteen minutes, allowing the sauce to simmer rather than boil. Flavor, if desired, with a teaspoonful of vanilla and pour over the sponge cake boxes.

THE WEIGHT GUIDE.

For individual assistance, write to Nancy Carey, sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and give age, weight, height and habits of life.

Answers to Readers.

Dear Miss Carey—The following reducing menu has been suggested to me. Would it be possible to eat so much and still lose weight? I think I do eat less but I just keep right on getting fatter all the time. Here is the diet. Breakfast: Orange, one egg (any way but fried), two pieces crisp bacon, one slice of toast and coffee with a little milk (no sugar). Luncheon: Vegetable soup, crackers tomato and lettuce salad with a very little French dressing, one roll with butter and one glass buttermilk Dinner: One lamb chop, baked potato, a green vegetable, cole slaw or vegetable salad, one roll, glass of milk (skimmed) and fresh fruit or fruit jello.

What do you think of it?

MRS. R. J. B.

I think it is a very fine diet, Mrs. R. J. B., one which, if carefully followed, should help you to reduce comfortably and safely. It lacks none of the vital food elements, contains plenty of bulk and roughage and is altogether satisfactory. If you will take time to check up on the total caloric value of such a day's menus, you will find that it does not exceed the amount allowed. And even though it may seem that you eat less and still continue to gain weight, there must be something wrong somewhere. Perhaps you are eating more concentrated foods, too much butter and toast, all of which furnish calories aplenty but, because they leave the stomach so quickly, do not satisfy the appetite. It is the little things that do the most damage—the accessories, as it were—the rich salad dressings, sugar, candies, rich cakes, pies and gravies; fat fish and meats, jams, nuts, cream, fried foods and cream soups. For the rest, the mainstay of your diet should remain substantial and usual; fruit, milk, eggs, lean meats, vegetables, salads of all kinds, wholegrain breads and simple desserts.

If you should like our folder of reducing suggestions, which contains a list of caloric values, we shall be very glad to send it to you. I think you will find the list helpful, if only to check up on yourself and see wherein your own diet has been at fault.

Refreshing Summer Beverages.

Summer days are thirsty days! And there are so many occasions when a sparkling, icy drink is most refreshing and welcome. It may be after a tiresome shopping day in town, a brisk game of tennis, or, perhaps, when friends "drop in" of a hot afternoon or evening. It really doesn't matter, for in our new folder you will find many suggestions for easily prepared, appropriate beverages—all equally delicious.

Send your request and a stamped, self-addressed envelope, to Nancy Carey, The Washington Post.

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

INFORMATION ABOUT MUMPS.

F. P. W. writes for an informative article on mumps, one that will give just the ordinary, everyday facts about the disease—those that parents should know.

The subject has not been covered for several years, since the disease is of secondary importance except when armies are being recruited. Epidemics of mumps in army recruiting camps and even in boarding schools for boys or girls sometimes take on disturbing proportions. The disease attacks children in their own homes, but in those circumstances it is rarely of much significance to the sick child or to the family.

It is due to an unknown virus which appears to locate in the mouth and to travel up one or more salivary ducts to one or more salivary glands. It is most apt to involve the parotid, the large salivary glands which lie just in front of and a trifle lower than the ear.

The time required for the disease to develop after exposure is around three weeks—sometimes less, and frequently a little more.

As a rule, the first symptom noted is a swelling in front of and a little below the ear. The swelling is not harmful and sometimes the patient has not noticed it when his attention is called to it. Eating or drinking something sour causes discomfort. If the temperature be taken, a little fever, say 101, is generally found to be present. When there has been close observation, as during the presence of an epidemic, it is generally found that a low fever precedes the swelling by a day or more. If the inside of the mouth be examined by a good, natural light, the opening of the infected duct is seen to be red and swollen. This symptom is found, when looked for, at least a day before the swelling of the parotid gland. When the first swelling is limited to one side of one gland, it happens not infrequently that other glands will swell within one week. If there are no complications, the disease generally terminates within a week. The usual complication is a swelling of a sex gland.

The disease is contagious and in most places it is reportable. The first duty of a parent, therefore, is to report the case to the health department. A quarantine sign may be tacked up, but that is about as far as most health departments go.

The vehicle of spreading is the saliva, but it is not known that it can be conveyed in any way except by close personal contact. A case begins to be contagious at least one day before the swelling of the face appears. Contagiousness is supposed to outlast the swelling. It is reputed that cases have been infective as long as six weeks after the onset of the disease.

Injections of serum from children convalescent from mumps is thought to confer immunity. It is regarded as a disease of adolescent boys and girls, but there are exceptions to the rule. Younger children occasionally develop it, and every now and then an adult has mumps.

One other fact: Health departments find that a mumps epidemic does not behave like one due to measles, or to any other disease, in that the cases of the former disease are more apt to be confined to one group, such as the soldiers in one barracks or house or the boys in one wing of a dormitory.

Advice on Gardening

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

VINES REQUIRE CARE.

WHEN purchasing a vine we must not judge its quality by the length of the branches, but rather by their number. Good vines are cut back to encourage growth, meaning a greater number of branches.

Generally speaking, climbers are deep-rooting. They have to search deep into the earth to find the food to sustain the expanse of top growth.

Vines come to us from all parts of the world, so we can not generalize and say that any soil will suit them.

One thing that can be said is that every time we plant a vine we should dig a hole 2 to 3 feet in diameter and at least 3 feet deep. A generous amount of well-rotted manure should be placed in the bottom of the hole, then about one-third of the original soil should be replaced and thoroughly incorporated with the manure. When this has been done and the soil firmed, the hole is ready for the root.

When planting, carefully spread out the roots, cover them with soil and tramp the soil until it is quite firm. A newly planted vine should stand slightly deeper than it did in the nursery. You can easily determine the depth it was formerly planted if you examine the main stems. Vines of a bulbous nature should be 4 inches below the surface after being planted.

Most climbing vines are rampant growers and must, therefore, have plenty of food. Each year-old, well-established vine should be fed well-rotted manure or other plant food.

One authority tells us the "climbers grown for their leaf display alone may be fed nitrogenous fertilizers, such as nitrate of soda and liquid manure."

It is a good plan to make it a rule to go out into the garden after each rain and carefully cultivate the soil about the vines.

Woody climbers, such as the honeysuckle or Virginia creeper, do not need much water when in a dormant state, but when growing they require a great deal.

Whenever it is possible give any vine a good sprinkling from underneath. This will assist in keeping down insects of all kinds, but especially red spider. Old, weakened climbers should have an occasional application of liquid manure. Mulching will be a great aid in the conservation of moisture.

SUMMER EMBASSY LEASED BY GERMANY

street northwest. Herr Lohmann will act as charge in the absence of Dr. Leitner.

It was learned from a source close to the embassy last night that the German diplomatic mission here has found that the summer burden of business here is as heavy, if not heavier, than that of the winter. The decision to establish a nearby embassy in a restful atmosphere, where surcease might be obtained from the pressure of work in the summer months, was thus made.

The Rixey estate comprises a number of acres. About eight acres and the mansion are embraced in the lease signed by the German negotiators which is for three months. The house is a spacious and modern dwelling. It is about five years old and was erected after Admiral Rixey's death.

Although it was indicated last night that comparatively little entertaining will be done at the summer German Embassy, the Rixey home is admirably suited therefor. A stately drawing room and other suitable rooms are on the first floor of the building. A large garage in the rear is reached by a tiled and lighted tunnel from the rear of the house, insuring comfortable exit and entrance during inclement weather.

A half dozen bedrooms and four baths are on the second floor of the structure, which is of modified colonial architectural lines. Servants' quarters are on the third floor and over the garage. Shrubbery and foliage in profusion adorn the grounds which command a magnificent panorama of Washington and its suburbs.

Mrs. Rixey is said to be living in the dwelling at present but will vacate shortly. The lease was negotiated through the firm of Sandoz, Inc.

Scores Feared Stranded In High Sierra Range

Grass Valley, Calif., May 29 (A. P.).—Scores of fishing and camping parties were believed to be marooned in the high Sierra Range today by an unseasonable storm that deposited an inch of rain over foothills and mountains last night.

Many who entered the mountains for a holiday week-end extending over Memorial Day were unprepared for storm conditions and the low temperatures that accompanied the rain. Earth roads were made impassable.

'Flapper Flier' Conquers Australian Continent

Melbourne, Australia, May 29 (A.P.).—Irene Dean-Williams, "flapper flier," has reached here from Perth (Western Australia), thus becoming the first woman to pilot an airplane across the Australian continent.

Part of the flight was across the Central Australian Desert, the "graveyard" of many fliers, where the air often is so hot and devoid of moisture that it blisters the mouth and nostrils.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

THE second of the major producing companies to break out a multicolored announcement of their new year's product in the trade press is Fox.

This may be of less importance than usual to Washington picture lovers, since Fox now has no exclusive, mandatory first-run outlet in the Capital, but must take its chances as part of a three-way split among Loew's Fox, Palace and Columbia theaters, along with Paramount, United Artists and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. However, there is enough of merit in the prospective Fox releases to warrant something more than a cursory glance.

For instance, as productions of particular interest and importance Fox points with presumable pride to an elaborate screen version of Noel Coward's enormous spectacle, "Calvalcade," that has been engrossing London theatergoers as a pageant of the stage of flesh and blood; the same author's "Bitter Sweet," which originally brought Evelyn Laye to the attention of Broadway; a new rendering of "What Price Glory," featuring Spencer Tracy, Ralph Bellamy and El Brendel; "Bad Boy," about which some mystery is thrown as a surprise attraction of which details will be revealed at a later date; "Hat Check Girl," "Little Teacher," "On Parade," "Congorilla," "Rackety Rax," "The Inside Story," "Havoc," "Shanghai Madness" and a long string of others.

The stars upon whom Fox will place greatest reliance include the Gaynor-Farrell and Dunn-Eilers teams, Will Rogers, Clara Bow, who will be seen in only one picture, "Call Her Savage;" Joan Bennett, Warner Baxter, George O'Brien, Elissa Landi and Edmund Lowe.

Among the featured players are listed such favorably known mimes as John Boles, Minna Gombell, Nora Lane, Greta Nissen, Peggy Shannon, Weldon Heyburn, Marian Nixon, Matty Kemp, Alexander Kirkland and numerous others.

The company seems to be equally fortified in the matter of directors. Among the notable names in this list are found Frank Borzage, John Blystone, David Butler, Alan Crosland, John Francis Dillon, David and William K. Howard, Henry King, Sidney Lanfield, director of "Society Girl," in which Jimmy Dunn and Peggy Shannon are currently occupying the screen at the Fox; Frank Lloyd, Alfred Santell, Marcel Varnel and Alfred Werker, the last two the least known of the lot.

And the Fox claim to distinction does not end there. Among the famous authors represented in the new 1932-33 output are listed Maxwell Anderson, Paul Armstrong, Henry M. Blossom, Guy Bolton, Frederick Hazlett Brennan, Noel Coward, Homer Croy, Zane Grey, Bret Harte, Laurence Stallings, Maurine Watkins, Edwin Burke, Barry Conners, Jules Furthman, Bradley King and a host of others.

If Sidney R. Kent, newly elected president of Fox, can whip his organization into an efficiently functioning machine from the more or less chaotic mess in which he takes it over, it looks as if Fox might be going somewhere next season.

Rafaela Ottiano, who appears as Greta Garbo's maid in "Grand Hotel"—having created the part on the stage—serves in the same capacity with the glamorous recluse in "As You Desire Me," current at the Palace.

There is, it seems, a reason for the extraordinarily natural performance Maureen O'Sullivan gave as the timorous young white girl, lost in the African jungles, in "Tarzan, the Ape Man."

Mr. Johnny Weissmuller, star of that gossamer whimsy, now appearing in person on the stage of Loew's Fox as star of the "Dive In" revue, has confided to those who have asked him that during most of the scenes in which she participated, Miss O'Sullivan was, to all intents and purposes, scared approximately stiff.

Since she can not swim a storke, the water scenes were terrifying. No less chilling were the episodes in the swaying treetops—especially since some of the supposedly harmless simians necessary to the action thought it playful to knock those two crazy humans off balance whenever they could!

Miss O'Sullivan, therefore, wasn't acting at all, but was actually and literally reduced to the jitters most of the time!

The more I contemplate the excellence of the musical interval being presented at the Earle by the act that bills itself as the "Song Writers on Parade," the more I am impressed that the turn's greatest effectiveness lies in the remarkable unison playing of the four pianos and the perfection of the tempo maintained in each number by these seven popular song writers.

These boys know exactly how their own compositions ought to be played and sung, and that is precisely the way they play and sing them. Result, one of the most diverting songologues presented on a local stage in this or any other season.

If you are among those who lament the failure of the all-male program promised by the Friars' Frolic ever to reach the Capital, the "Song Writers on Parade" are probably offering a better, although briefer, period of distraction.

And if you happened to be one who is distressed that a member of the audience should walk out on Jack Pepper and his two stooges during their turn at the Fox, in such brazen fashion that the boys do a little wisecracking at him, it may relieve your feelings to know that the gentleman who exits at every performance is Jack's father! Or so they tell me.

Not that it matters, but I still think it's a pretty scurvy trick to sweep dirt all over the late Baron Von Galgern's pet dachshund in that final sequence of "Grand Hotel." Or don't you care for dogs?

In case it had slipped your mind, now would be a good time to hang out the flag!

'PORK BARREL' BARB ALIBI, SAYS GARNER

didate for reelection this year and if the popular verdict stands as has been indicated by every recent election, he must realize that his stay at the White House is drawing to a close."

Mr. Rainey recalled that most of the $1,209,000,000 in public building and waterway improvement projects in the Garner program had been recommended by either the Coolidge or present administration and said it was difficult to reconcile Mr. Hoover's charges of 'pork barrel' when he had previously sponsored such a program.

"In his recent pronouncement against the Garner plan, the President absolutely reverses every position he has heretofore taken," Mr. Rainey said.

"Nothing to Show For It."

Asserting that by July 1, $4,000,000,000 would be added to the national indebtedness since Mr. Hoover became President, The Illinois Democrat said:

"The enormous amount represented by this deficit is twice as much as we provide for in expenditures over a series of years in this bill, and we have absolutely nothing to show for it in the way of capital investment. It is money absolutely dissipated and thrown to the winds in order to enable the Hoover administration to do nothing at all except to promote the candidacy of the President for reelection.

President Hoover, as President, has registered a failure practically complete.

"All the expenditures we have been making under his approval and his suggestions for the resuscitation of banks, railroads and insurance companies will have been absolutely wasted unless our program is adopted. If our program is defeated, the worst is yet to come. * * *

To Insist on Cooperation.

"We have tried to cooperate with the President in his supposed plans for a restoration of normal conditions. The country has been accustomed to strong leadership from the White House, not the vacillating leadership we are getting now."

He added it takes a lot of courage to follow the 'vacillating public policy of the President,' and declared the Chief Executive's stand was out of harmony with the Republican platform on which he was elected and the platform recently adopted by the Illinois Republican convention.

"From now on we propose to insist that the President cooperate with us in our program," Mr. Rainey continued, "and if he fails to do it, and if our program is defeated on account of his opposition to it, we propose to place the responsibility where it belongs, directly on the President of the United States and his vacillating, incompetent leadership."

Retired Chicago Broker Dies in 12-Story Plunge

Chicago, May 29 (A.P.).—E. Bogardus Shaw, 60, retired broker, was killed today in a fall from the window of his twelfth-floor home on Lake Shore drive. His apartment is within five blocks of the home of Edward F. Swift, packer, who was killed in a similar fall yesterday.

Shaw, a member of the Chicago Stock Exchange, was a brother of Walden W. Shaw, long identified with the manufacture of taxicabs and a founder of the Chicago Yellow Cab Co. Servants said that Shaw had complained of feeling ill and was helped to bed. A few minutes later the janitor heard his body strike the concrete driveway adjoining the apartment building.

MAN TO BE QUIZZED ON MISSING WIFE

of Mrs. Orndorff's relatives for the woman. Their search, without result, was brought to a halt by a telephone call informing Sheriff Pannett if he would call a certain number at Stephens City, near here, he could talk to Mrs. Orndorff. The sheriff, he said today, called the number and was told "Mrs. Orndorff is here."

About April 1, Orndorff's relatives told the sheriff the woman had not been seen. Pannett investigated and found Mrs. Orndorff had never been in Stephens City.

Sheriff Pannett and Commonwealth's Attorney Harrison renewed their search with vigor, after finding the story of Mrs. Orndorff being at Stephens City a hoax.

Pit Found at Home.

Orndorff was grilled, but denied knowledge of the whereabouts or disappearance of his wife. He declared he was working on a neighbor's farm when his wife left home, but neighbors declared that Orndorff had borrowed a pick and shovel on the morning of December 29.

Search on Orndorff's premises at Star Tannery disclosed a freshly dug pit about 6 feet long, 3 feet wide and 4 feet deep. The pit had been filled in and covered over by a chicken coop. Officers reexcavated the pit, but found nothing therein.

Searching the mountainside for any trace of the missing woman, Sheriff Pannett said he found a pair of her shoes about a mile from the Orndorff home. The husband declared he did not know how they got there.

Cedar Creek, running close to the Orndorff home, has been dragged for three miles, but no body or trace of Mrs. Orndorff was found.

Believed Mailed by Orndorff.

Last week Sheriff Pannett received a letter postmarked Toms Brook, Shenandoah County, stating: "Mrs. Orndorff is safe and well. She is with me."

Investigation at Toms Brook disclosed two men and a woman had mailed the letter, according to the postmaster. One man, according to the postmaster's description, resembled Orndorff. The letter Pannett received was turned over to handwriting experts together with a specimen of Orndorff's handwriting. The experts declared both inscriptions were made by the same person. Search of the Orndorff home disclosed writing paper identical to that on which the letter was written, Sheriff Pannett added.

Following the opinion of experts on the handwriting, Commonwealth's Attorney Harrison procured the warrant from Magistrate A. J. Tavenner alleging that Orndorff murdered his wife.

No one, according to officers, has seen or heard of Mrs. Orndorff, dead or alive since December 29.

Divers Nearing Sunken Treasure of $5,270,000

Brest, France, May 29 (A.P.).—Divers from the Italian ship Artiglio II have succeeded in enlarging the hole they had previously made in the strong room of the treasure ship Egypt, lying off Brest. The divers must enlarge the hole before any of the treasure can be extracted.

The Egypt, A. P. & O. liner, went down in collision with the French steamer Seine in May, 1920, with gold and silver aboard worth $5,270,000. The wreck lies 396 feet under water.

DETROIT REPORTERS GET PULITZER PRIZE

Five on Free Press to Receive $200 Each for Story on Legion Parade.

New York, May 29 (A.P.).—Five reporters on the staff of the Detroit Free Press were announced today as winners of the annual Pulitzer prize for reporting in consideration of their story on the American Legion parade in 1931.

President Nicholas Murray Butler, of Columbia University, said the $1,000 prize would be divided equally among W. C. Richards, D. D. Martin, J. S. Pooler, F. D. Webb and J. N. W. Sloan.

Honorable mention was accorded Frank W. Griffin and Harry E. Kalonder, of the Philadelphia Record, and Harry Bloom and J. Howard Henderson, of the Louisville (Ky.) Times.

The advisory board of the Columbia School of Journalism selected the winners and their collaboration from among more than 1,000 reporters and exhibits, 15 of which had been nominated for final consideration.

Richards, 46, was educated at the University of Michigan, and is a student of foreign affairs and social service work. He joined the Free Press staff in 1916 and is the author of a Sunday column.

Martin, 45, has had wide experience in the newspaper field and was editor of the Detroit Masonic News for ten years.

Pooler, 27, graduated from the University of Detroit, and went to the Free Press at the age of 18. He has written several plays.

Webb, 34, was a student at the University of Michigan, and affiliated with the Detroit paper in 1924, serving in many capacities.

Sloan, 33, received a degree from Columbia University and became a student of romance languages and comparative literature. He has been on the staff six years.

The five Free Press reporters, working against press time, coordinated their efforts to prepare for their paper a colorful detailed story of the Legion parade. They made of it, the announcement of the award said, an excellent example of preparation of a local story of national significance.

LAUSANNE MAY TRY TO GIVE TRADE BOOST

to return to London, was fully determined to go to Lausanne and was immersed in preparations for the conference, to which he attaches the greatest importance.

(Associated Press.)

Although the United States naturally would watch with interest any international discussion of trade, there was no indication here last night that this Government would be drawn into such discussions in connection with the Lausanne reparations conference as proposed by Prime Minister MacDonald.

This country's position has been that it is for Europe itself to consider reparations as the United States had no reparations, and there has been nothing to indicate that even broadening of the Lausanne meeting as proposed by MacDonald would modify that hands-off position.

Publication of the British prime minister's plan reopened speculation over whether it was a subject touched upon in the telephone conversation last week between him and Secretary Stimson. Official sources, however, gave no intimation of previous knowledge of the MacDonald proposal and made no comment.

Stimson Talked to MacDonald.

Stimson, who was at his Long Island home over the week-end, has confirmed talking with the British official, but the subject of their conversation has been kept strictly secret.

An independent international commercial conference has been advocated in various quarters here since the decline in foreign trade began, and an international meeting to consider bringing tariff regulations of the various countries into mutual accord was one of the provisions in the Democratic House tariff bill recently vetoed by President Hoover.

Rouen, France, May 29 (U.P.).—Wisdom suggests the cancellation of all war debts and reparations, Paul Painleve, Republican-Socialist leader, declared today in a significant speech interpreting French public opinion.

Painleve Outlines Views.

Painleve, who probably will be a member of the new cabinet, followed up recent moves toward readjustment of reparations by outlining his view of French opinion as follows:

1. France refuses to permit Germany wilfully to destroy the reparations agreement.

2. It is admitted, however, Germany can not pay under the present circumstances.

3. France is willing to adopt a spirit of concession under proper circumstances.

4. Unconditional payments must be renounced for a long time.

"A fierce quarrel over money is going to open at the Lausanne reparations conference," Painleve said in a speech to left-wing party members.

Safeguards Are Recommended.

"Nevertheless, in order to forestall the possibility that Germany may be relieved in addition of an interior debt and soon become an overwhelming commercial competitor, and that the creditor countries would thus become victims of their own generosity, certain financial processes can be provided which automatically will come into play.

"For example, a sort of compensating fund might be established. In it all interested countries would be treated equally, and it would be maintained between them for the purpose of economic fair play."

Painleve admitted this would be difficult to accomplish, due to the isolation of the United States, but he suggested that Europeans first reach a general liquidation agreement and later—as has been frequently suggested—submit the proposition to the United States.

Argentine Consul, 72, Found Shot Critically

Leghorn, Italy, May 29 (A.P.).—Don Pedro Bossio, 72, Argentine consul, was found shot through the head in the study of his home here today. His condition was critical.

The consul, also known as a philanthropist, had been worrying over ill health recently.

OLD-TIME ANIMAL SHOW REACHES CITY

Gentry Brothers Greeted by Children and Memory-Filled Parents.

Gentry Brothers showa, the same old trained animal shows that last exhibited in Washington 20 years ago, drove in yesterday morning and made themselves at home at Wisconsin avenue and S street northwest. This will be their home today and tomorrow. Working under the new rule of "taking the shows to the patron," these shows will move six times in the seven show days they remain the Capital City.

As of yore, the grounds were crowded with children—and the children of yesterday. The latter saw and know the shows well. All were allowed free rein to range over the grounds and visit with the trained animals. As the shows cater especially to women and children, attaches answer all questions, no matter how many may seem amusing.

Henry B. Gentry, who founded the shows in 1888, disbanded them in 1915 and reorganized them in 1931, was present. He is the last one would choose as "the governor," because he was among his working army in his working clothes.

While in Washington the shows will give performances daily at 3:30 and 8 p. m. The late matinee is for school children. Wednesday the shows will be at Georgia avenue and Military road; Thursday, in Silver Spring, Md; Friday, at Wisconsin avenue and Yuma street northwest; Saturday, at Rhode Island avenue and Seventeenth street northeast, and Monday, June 6, in C street between Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets northeast.

Carol Is Warned By Mystery Man

Mme. Lupescu Is Brought Into History Parable in Party Organ.

Vienna, May 29 (A.P.).—A mysterious parable writer who signs himself "" and is believed by many to be Gen. Alexandru Averescu, leader of the Roumanian People's party, caused excitement in Bucharest today with veiled warnings of death for King Carol of Roumania and his friend, Mme. Magda Lupescu.

Months ago he hinted strongly at dethronement of the Roumanian king, but recently his writings have taken a more sober turn. A week ago he alluded to the death of the French king, Henry II, in terms leaving no doubt he was warning King Carol.

The cafes buzzed today over his latest "history parable" in the People's party organ, Indreptarea, which again plays with the death theme in what some readers interpreted as an attack on Mme. Lupescu, red-haired companion of Carol's Paris exile before he became king.

"There Ought to Be a Law"

People who have been victimized by some financial, stock, bond, or land scheme so often make this remark and possibly there really ought to be a law.

But, these people and all individuals have the power to protect themselves regardless of whether there is, or is not, a law. So often the victims can trace the cause to themselves; that they were careless, or gullible, or, possibly, greedy. Just remember—to always get the facts before making an investment—that you can never get something for nothing.

"Before You Invest—Investigate"

If you remember this slogan of the Better Business Bureau and follow its intent, you personally will need no law for your protection, you will then be protecting yourself.

It costs nothing to be careful. The Bureau will be glad to aid you in investigating unknown investment offers without charge or obligation.

YANKS SLAM BURKE, RAGLAND TO BEAT NATS, 11-8

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

THE Nats made a fancy start and a flourishing finish yesterday against the Yankees, but in between times, from the first inning to the eighth, they were just a contingent of the great army of the unemployed as far as their batting was concerned.

This department lost count of the Yankee scoring in the late inning, but when a team can withstand a six-run assault in the last two frames and then win handily by a three-run margin, the exact score is unimportant.

In these depressionistic times, Babe Ruth is thankful that Washington is still in the American League. The Babe has hit fourteen home runs this season and six have been against Washington pitching.

In his first two months in the big league, Ragland has learned that this guy Ruth is no myth. Two of the Babe's homers have been made off the slants of the Mississippi farmer boy.

The Yanks will be glad to shake the dust of the Washington ball field from their shoes. In the four-game series that ended yesterday, the New York Club made twelve errors, half of them by the outfielders.

Bob Burke seemed in a fair way of equalling his record of three weeks ago when he walked twelve Yankees in six and one-third innings, but he was humanely lifted in the fifth after walking only five.

Lefty Gomez didn't have his strike-out ball yesterday and was far shy of the thirteen whiffs he achieved against the Athletics last week. Berg and Burke were his only victims, but for seven innings he had a three-hit game in his possession.

The Yankees were getting maximum production on base hits all afternoon. They scored a run on one hit in the second, three runs on three hits in the fifth, another run on one hit in the seventh, and then in the eighth and ninth, clustered three runs each in rallies that showed only two hits.

Earl Combs was the most surprised individual in the ball park when Bluege's throw beat him to first in the third inning. It was a perfect bunt and labeled "hit" until Judge took Bluege's lightning throw.

Bobby Burke set a new season's record for high infield bounces when his tap hit the plate and bounded into the stratosphere before settling in Lary's glove. Burke reached first before the ball came down. It could have been called an infield fly.

Ragland's batting average underwent a painful operation when he struck out in the fifth. He had led the club at bat with a .333 average and his whiff cost him 75 points. He now shows a record of one hit in four times up.

With Babe Ruth at bat in the seventh, Cronin played directly behind second base, one of the Babe's favorite spots for singles, and Kerr took up a position as assistant right fielder, but the Babe crossed them both by knocking the ball over the fence.

Ruth apparently has slowed up considerably. He looked woefully slow on the bases after clouting the ball over the right field wall.

To save wear and tear on the Bambino, they put Hoag in to run for him in the ninth. The Babe has only so many trips around the bases left in his aging system and the Yankees' program is one of careful conservation wherein Ruth is concerned.

Considine Is Beaten by Mitchell

1,000 See Champion Retain Crown in 4-Set Match.

Former Titleholder Is Loser by 6-2, 4-6, 7-5, 6-2 Scores.

ANOTHER chapter, written in flaming red scroll, was added to the story of Washington's pet tennis feud as Dooly Mitchell retained his City of Washington championship by virtue of a four-set triumph over lanky Bob Considine at the Sixteenth street reservoir yesterday. The scores were 6—2, 4—6, 7—5, 6—2. The victory gives Mitchell a second leg on th Jock McLean trophy, which must be won three times for permanent possession.

This latest of battles between these Capital stars outstripped all of its predecessors in thrills. From the moment the first ball went zooming over the net in the opening set, until Mitchell had subdued the seemingly indefatigable Considine with a cannonade of shots in the final game, the 1,000 fans who witnessed the match sat tense in their seats, never knowing what next to expect.

Mitchell Takes First Set.

The plans of each of the contestants coincided to the extent that they concentrated on each others forehand, endeavoring to lay open a weakness. Mitchell, displaying a bullet-like service, fired deep into his opponent's territory and very often escaping out-of-bounds by a scant inch or so, proved to be the master in the first set, which he won easily. But Considine, who had marched from the lowest depths of the tennis world to the highest in a great comeback, was not to be denied the taste of victory in at least one set of the most important match he has participated in this season.

He grimly battled Mitchell point-for-point unttil the ninth game had been reached, when he seized the lead by smashing through Dooly's service to win the game. Considine's volleying carried him to victory in this set.

Considine Near Victory.

Mitchell trailed 3—1 in games, in the third set, but added steam to his drives, propelling the ball over the net at a 2-mile-a-minute clip, to even the count at 3—3. At this juncture Considine forged ahead to a 5—4 advantage in games, and 30-love score in what would have been the deciding game had he not faltered. But once again Mitchell called into play reserve stamina and lashed the sphere at his rival with deadly accuracy. His drives miraculously dropped within the playing court as he drove to victory. He broke Considine's serve to win the next game and eventually the set.

It was all Mitchell in the fourth set. Placing his shots superbly, and frequently coming to the net to score on his opponent, he won the set with ease. Considine, although handicapped by a blister on his foot, refused to surrender and fought to the last ditch, but in vain.

Fred Sendel and Alan Staubley gained the final round in the men's doubles by virtue of their 6—4, 6—3 victory over Gilbert Hunt and Dick Mason. Hunt and Mason encountered a tough streak of luck when a great many of their shots avoided the playing court by less than a hair's breadth, a costly loss in the matter of points. The winners will oppose Dr. Gerald Smith and Maj. Fred Dorst for the title at 3 p. m. today. One hour later Mrs. Ruth Martinez and Ruth Walker will play for the women's championship.

Forty Drivers Await Gun For 500-Mile Race Today

U. S., Foreign Daredevils on Edge at Indianapolis.

BILLY ARNOLD.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 29 (A.P.).—Undaunted by the wildest series of mishaps that has preceded a 500-mile automobile race here in years, 40 intrepid pilots and their equally nervy riding mechanics today awited the starting bomb of the annual Memorial Day classic at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

A driver and a mechanic were killed and another driver and another mechanic were sent to a hospital with broken bodies as the result of crashes during practice preparatory to the race. A half-dozen other daredevils of the track miraculously escaped with their lives in crack-ups.

"Too bad about Milt Jones and Harry Cox," they say, and in the next breath the drivers tell how fast they intended to negotiate the 2½-mile brick course in quest of fame and a portion of the $100,000 prize money. Jones was the driver and Cox the mechanic who met death in the practice runs.

The race starts tomorrow at 10 a. m., Central standard time. In the pole position will be Lou Moore, of Hollywood, Calif., a place he attained by making the fastest time during the qualifying trials—117 miles an hour average for a 10-mile run.

Lined up alongside Moore in the front row will be Billy Arnold, of Chicago, the 1930 winner, and Bryan Saulpaugh, a huge young man from Rock Island, Ill., who has been cutting speed capers on West Coast tracks.

Arnold is back in the race despite a mishap in the contest last year that sent him to a hospital for months. Far ahead and with only 100 miles to go his car lost a wheel and he was picked up with injuries that seemed likely to end his racing career.

The other entrants will line up

Robins Score, 3-2 After Braves Win

Boston Takes Opener With 8-Run Rally; Vance Yields but 3 Hits.

Brooklyn, May 29 (A.P.).—The Dodgers and the Boston Braves waged a pair of exciting battles for the edification of some 25,000 fans today, but wound up just where they started, each winning one game.

Boston landed on Babe Phelps for eight runs in the second inning and took the opener, 10 to 6. Brooklyn came back with a ninth-inning rally behind the three-hit pitching of Dazzy Vance to capture the second game, 3 to 2.

A barrage of hits, capped by a homer by Art Shires and aided by errors by Phelps and Finn made Boston's big rally.

Despite his great pitching, Vance was trailing 2-1 going into the last half of the ninth, but Bruce Caldwell, stepped into the breach and won the game. Caldwell, pinch hitting for Vance, drove in the tying run and scored the winning tally on O'Doul's hit.

Wes Schulmerich hit a homer in the first half of the ninith to put Buston ahead but Maranville started the last half with a disturbing error on Picinich's grounder. Sukeforth sacrificed and Caldwell singled to left to drive Pinch Runner Stripp home.

Mrs. Moody Wins Twice In France

Scores in Straight Set as Helen Jacobs Is Given Scare.

Wood Winner in 4 Sets; Lacoste Is Pressed to Win.

AUTEUIL, France, May 29 (A.P.).—France won the only title decided in the French hard court tennis championships today, but Helen Wills Moody stole the show as she made her first appearance in singles play and gained the quarter-final round in impressife fashion.

The American champion, drawing a first round bye, gave Marcelle Beague, of France, only one game in winning her inaugural match, 6—0, 6—1, and then defeated the Dutch fraulien, Rolande Couquerque, 6—4, 6—2 in a third-round test.

The men's doubles championship went to the Davis Cup combination of Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon, who defeated the young French team of Christian Boussus and Marcel Bernard, 6—4, 3—6, 7—5, 6—3. Boussus and Bernard started out impressively, but the veterans outclassed them after the middle of the third set had been reached.

Elizabeth Ryan Beaten.

Helen Jacobs, Gregory S. Mangin and Sidney B. Wood also checked in with American victories today, but Mrs. Dorothy Andrus Burke, of Stamford, Conn., and Elizabeth Ryan, the veteran Californian, who makes her home in England, met defeat.

Mrs. Burke was eliminated in the second round of women's singles by Mlle. Ida Adamoff, 6—3, 6—4, and Miss Ryan and her French partner, Brugnon, were eliminated in the quarter-finals of mixed doubles by Betty Nuthall and Fred Perry, of England, 6—4, 4—6, 6—2.

Miss Jacobs played unimpressively in a second round match with Fraulein Anna Peitz, of Germany, but won in there sets, 4—6, 6—0, 7—5.

Wood was carried to four sets by Marcel Journu, of France, 6—3, 6—2, 3—6, 6—1, but his next opponent, Rene Lacoste, French master, who is attempting a comeback, had to go five to down the Russian, Serge Rodzianko, 6—1, 6—3, 4—6, 3—6, 6—1. Mangin won in straight sets from Jacques Glasser, 6—4, 6—2, 6—1.

Lee and Satoh Triumph.

NEARBY RINGS OFFER FANS PLENTY OF ACTION THIS WEEK

Shows Listed Tomorrow, Wednesday

Strickler, Schwartz Ready for Clashes at Alexandria.

Antonelli, Kirkwood Face Hard Test at Twin-City.

WITH bouts scheduled in every division except flyweight and heavyweight, boxing fans of the Capital are due for plenty of action this week with the Alexandria Day Nursery staging a 32-round card tomorrow night in Portner Arena and Twin-City Arena presenting a 34-round show Wednesday night.

Tomorrow night's offering features a trio of eight-round bouts supported by a pair of fours, the longer tiffs involving Billy Stickler and Cowboy Owen Phelps, light heavyweights; Benny Schwartz and Antol Kocsis, bantamweights, and Joe Fino and Midget Mike Dundee, bantamweights.

Middleweights and featherweights are engaged in the two ten-round scuffles headlining the Twin-City card. Frankie Fullam and Walter Kirkwood, 160-pounders, are matched in one of the Laurel plant's features, with Nick Antonelli and Al Martin opposed in the other.

Billy Strickler, Washington's iron-man southpaw and the only local performer in the Day Nursery features, concluded the harder part of his training yesterday afternoon with a slam-bang sparring session against Billy Edwards in Frankie Mann's gymnasium.

Strickler, weighing 166 pounds after the workout, declared himself ready to put up the best fight of his career. He promised to continue the pleasing effort that won him a new host of admirers early this month when he battered out an eight-round decision over Bill Plemster, light-heavy champion of the Carolinas.

In meeting Phelps, Strickler takes on probably the toughest assignment of his life. The cowboy ranks among the world's ten best 175-pounders and has quite an edge on Strickler as regards experience. Maxie Rosenbloom, light-heavyweight champion, declared upon his recent visit that Phelps is one of the most rugged men in his division today.

Schwartz Reported Ready.

Word was received last night that Benny Schwartz, veteran Baltimore bantam, has worked himself down to 118 pounds for Kocsis, the Hungarian champion. Schwartz dropped a heart-breaking decision to Billy Landers three weeks ago after seemingly piling up a distinct edge in points. The decision was roundly booed.

If Schwartz earns the nod over Kocsis he will have all but wiped out the Landers defeat. Another meeting with the Norfolk youth will doubtless be offered Benny.

Roddy Davis, fast-improving Capital lightweight, engages Donald First, recent conqueror of Marino Marini, in one of the fours supporting tomorrow night's card. Whitey Saylor, of Birmingham (Ala.) welterweight, and Oscar Voight, Baltimore, will mix in the other.

Regarding his Wednesday night tiff with Al Martin, Nick Antonelli stated yesterday: "I've never trained so hard for a fight since deserting the amateurs. Naturally, I want to repeat my previous win from Martin, but there's a bigger reason—the depression. It's hit my work, tile setting, and I've got to eat, yuh know."

A week of road jaunts around La Plata, Md., and daily gymnasium licks have put Antonelli in the well-known pink. He tipped the beam at 125 yesterday.

Walter Kirkwood, a Washington boy who has been doing most of his fighting in and around Norfolk, has whipped himself into razor-edge condition for Fullam, the New York prospect, who first attracted fistic notice through his sensational performance at Catholic University. Kirkwood's stock locally will take an upward trend in the event he defeats the Gotham hopeful. A special section of seats has been reserved for Catholic University students.

Twin City's preliminary card lists Roy Manley, Oklahoma junior welter, vs. Al Napolitano, New York, six rounds; Doug Swetman, local feather, vs. Joe Dody, Johnstown, Pa., four, and Mike Scipio, Baltimore lightweight, vs. Roma Labona, Washington, four.

JOE AND ASBESTOS

(Watch Sunday's Post for New Secret Code) —By Ken Kling

Rockroma was scratched Saturday, and although his stablemate won, the bet did not go, so the roll is still $52.94. Joe tries his famous handicap system again today but is very nervous because of uncertain track conditions. Let's wish him luck. To date his roll on $5 bets is $298.

AT THE POST
—with Bill Bennings

WASHINGTON PARK.

DEAR AL,

I know that close don't count except in pitching horseshoes but you and I had a tough break last Saturday. Old Dr. Freeland, carrying our dough at the magnificent odds of 11-1, put up a game battle to finish third. He was beaten two necks and the margin looked closer. Then, Portmanteau bowed by a neck and Tiger Flowers lost by a head. However, the day brought its reward in two winners here—Grand Prince and Trinchera—and two winners and a second—Sergt. Donaldson, Fair Jack and Peturnal—out of the three horses that ran at other tracks.

What a whale of a difference a stride or two means. Can't break that way forever. Here's some for your attention today at other courses: Canron, Gay Party, Louis Merryman, Guide Right, Marion T., Faylin, Tuscan Knight.

BILL.

FIRST RACE—FLYING HOME set a fast pace the last time and I expect him to stick by his guns today to take these maidens in camp. Ambrose probably will have the mount and seems the right boy for a hustling ride. TWEENY met a better field last time and may be second here ahead of I PASS.

SECOND RACE—STROLL ALONG is a speedy youngster as was proven in Maryland. May have needed that last race and I forsee a victory. Must beat the fast LIQUEUR to take the big end of this purse. GLORITONE was speedy at Churchill Downs and may be the third one THIRD RACE—MAD CAREER was beaten a head in his start here, but was far from disgraced. Seems to have an edge over this band. PROSE AND POETRY won twice in a row at Churchill Downs and finished fast in his last race. Appears to be second best. CAIUS for third.

FOURTH RACE—The veteran JUSTINIAN can uncork a mean turn of foot on occasions. Did not impress in his race here, but was a fast sprinter during the winter season at the Fair Grounds. That last might have been needed in view of the long rest. WAR SAINT appears to be the one to beat. FLAG BEARER for the short end.

FIFTH RACE—TECHNIQUE won the other day, and although this is a classier field, I'm watching for another set of brackets. This youngster is well regarded and works like lightning. NITUMA to win the second honors from GOOD SCOUT.

SIXTH RACE—The figures don't point to BRASS MONKEY to win this, but I have a feeling that he will turn the trick. Allen will ride and I look for a better performance. GARLIC is in top shape and the dangerous one. SUNFIRE for the lesser award.

SEVENTH RACE—GABBO was a smart gelding out West and ran a good race the last time out at this course. Stopped at the end to take third money. Might not have liked setting that fast pace and may get a little different ride today. MASTER OGDEN is still hard to pass up. CHUM for the short end.

By LEWIS F. ATCHISON.

OLD MAN UPSET, whose absence in the unlimited division of The Post's Capital City League has been very noticeable, popped up in Section B yesterday as Columbia Heights turned the tables on Rock Creek Servicenter to gain a 14-9 victory and assume the lead in the race. He was also in evidence at the Franc Jeweler-St. Joseph's game, which the former won by a score of 5-4. Federal Storage swamped Federal Employe Unionists, 10-1, in the only other game in this division.

Ciro's Villagers continued on their rampage through the ranks of the contenders in Section A, running rough-shod over Horning Jewelers to score a 10-2 victory. The Dixie Pigs paced the leaders with a 7-2 win over City Cab, while Congress Heights was chalking up its second league victory at the expense of the Union Printers, who bowed by a score of 10-6.

Wiltshire Among Sluggers.

A trio of sluggers, Wiltshire, Harding and Wingate, brought victory to Columbia Heights with timely base hits. The Servicenter came within an ace of knotting the count at 8-8 in the seventh inning. In the next frame, the eventual winners broke loose to tally another quintet of markers and safely stow away the decision. Sorrell clouted a homer for the losers, and Ensor connected for a trio of bingles, but was unable to stem the flow of base hits of his opponents.

The chief hero of the Franc's triumph was best. His circuit clout, coming in the sixth inning with the scores deadlocked at 4-4, decided the issue. Franc scored a trio of markers in the third on hits by Hemelt, Charley, Albert, Batson and Bill Albert. Batson contrived to hold the Saints to six hits.

Knight's home run featured the attack of the Federal Storage tossers in their victory over the Unionists. Britt and Wasko also came through with long clouts. Milburn and Medder held the losers to six blows, while Mattare and Terry were being pounded for fourteen.

Adair in Fine Form.

Young Al Adair held City Cab to seven hits and fanned fourteen as the Dixie Pigs handled the offerings of Frank Corkins for ten safeties to gain a 7-2 win. "Fee" Collier and Eddie Dove were the ringleaders in the attack that brought the downfall of the Cabmen. A three-run rally in the fifth inning clinched the laurels.

Pete Ingram, although touched for ten hits, effectively scattered these, and did a bit of hitting on his own hook, to lead Congress Heights to victory. The Heights nine was off to an early lead which it increased as the game progressed. Gilbert's home run featured the slugging. Ingram fanned eleven Printers, but was nicked for a pair of runs when he eased up in the ninth.

Jack Casper's hitting and Frank Di Ninna's twirling halted the Horning Jewelers. Casper collected five hits in five trips to the plate, driving over five runs, while Di Ninna was holding the foe to ten blows, and fanning thirteen.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS —By John Hix

EVEN a fish must have its bath when it gets ready for a trip. The Bureau of Fisheries in Washington, D. C., has found that a "health bath" enables fish to better weather the disagreeable shipping. The bath consists of a thorough dipping in water which has a few drops of acetic acid mixed in it. The bath also rids the fish of parasites clinging to the scales.

High Schools Seek Two Sports Titles

Baseball and Track Crowns at Stake in Battles This Week.

Long past due, the high school track and baseball championship will be up for settling this week. Dogged by bad weather and the inability of Eastern, Central and Western to break a beautiful baseball tie, has extended the two events well beyond their scheduled time of action.

With the fading of Central's Baseball Team last week, when a victory would have earned it its first diamond pennant in a decade, Western's stock began to boom. Tuesday, Western plays Eastern in the final game of a series of three which the high school officials hoped would end the play-off.

If Western conquers Eastern Tuesday it will win the pennant, with a record of two wins and no losses in the play-off.

The track meet Wednesday is expected to be one of the most bitterly contested in years. Eastern, the defending champion, will be potentially 39 points weaker over 1931, when it had Everett, Slye and Hutchinson. Central is looked upon as the likely winner of the meet, but Tech is strong and Eastern, with many new boys, can not be overlooked.

Kentucky Boy Hurls Perfect Ball Game

Lexington, Ky., May 29 (A.P.).—Raymond Rhoads, former University of Kentucky star pitcher, twirled a perfect game here this afternoon as the Lexington Eppings, a semipro team, defeated Cynthiana, of the Blue Grass League, 11 to 0.

The game was Rhoads' second no-hit game. He pitched his first while at the University of Kentucky.

Washington Cricket Club Winner, 58 to 57

Special to The Washington Post.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 29.—The Washington Cricket Club defeated the Middlesex Club in a close match at Elmwood by the score of 58 to 57.

The fielding was smartly done by both clubs but nothing spectacular was shown by either side when at bat.

Tank Corps Beats Celtics Nine, 15-14

Army Team, Trailing by Ten Runs, Rallies to Win on Smith's Balk.

Special to The Washington Post.

Alexandria, Va., May 29.—Camp Meade Tank Corps Baseball Team exhibited the never-say-die spirit this afternoon and defeated the St. Mary's Celtics nine, 15 to 14, after being 10 runs behind as late as the fourth inning. With the score tied in the ninth inning, 14 to 14, and Keller, on third by virtue of his triple, Smith, Celtic pitcher, committed a balk and allowed Keller to score with the winning run. Keller, Fencker and Krausslick led in the attack on the Celtic pitchers, garnering eight hits between them. Hamilton, with three safeties, was the best bet for the Celtics.

"Get an ice-cold soda * * * Hot dogs! * * * And immediately after the big show the Unequaled Jimmy will amaze you with his sensational aerial act * * * He will fling La Belle Manhattan thru the air, catching her by the toes and leaving her unscathed!"

ANOTHER RECORD FOR JIMMY WALKER.

THE evidence that Mayor Walker got $246,692.76 from a brokerage account carried for him by Paul Block without ever putting up a penny would seem to put Jimmy on record as the original beneficiary of the so-called Block-Aid relief movement.

FORESIGHT.

The Block-Walker brokerage account was closed out on August 5, 1929. Which all people who remained in the market another two weeks will admit entitles both boys to a decoration for sagacity.

THEN AND NOW.

The Bawl Street Journal, the brokers' annual burlesque of the Wall Street Journal, makes the observation that the check that used to come back marked "No funds" now comes back marked "No bank."

NO ADVANTAGE HERE.

A robot or mechanical salesman has been invented and exhibited at a radio exposition. But the trouble just now is that all the customers are mechanical listeners.

"With all my worldly goods I thee endow" has been voted out of the Methodist marriage ritual. In a depression like this the comic reaction was too obvious.

Packing Firm Wins Safety Award.

A pennant has been awarded to the Phillips Genuine Saugage Co. here by the Institute of American Meat Packers because of its operation during April without any lost time accidents. The institute is conducting a safety campaign during 1932 among its member companies.

Civic Leaders Plan Giant Tax Protest

Gather in Chicago to "Lay Down Law" to Parties and Congress.

Chicago, May 29 (A.P.).—With the avowed purpose of "getting results from Congress and both political parties," 1,000 or more State and civic leaders from coast to coast will gather in Chicago this week in protest against mounting taxes.

The first aim of the conference is to make an impression upon Congress with the hope of tightening governmental purse strings during the remainder of the present session, during which many appropriation items are yet to be considered.

Secondly, it is intended to "lay down the law" to the platform makers of the Republican and Democratic national conventions. It was with that in view that the tax meeting was set for Chicago, scene of both conventions, just two weeks before the first of the political conclaves opens.

The conference opens Wednesday and extends through Thursday, with leaders in every field of industry in attendance. A proposed taxing program fair to all and burdensome to none is intended to be written out of the meeting.

LEGISLATIVE INQUIRY.

(A Ringside Impression of the Investigation of Mayor Walker of New York City.)

"THIS way, ladies and gentlemen! * * * This way to the Greatest Show on Earth! * * * See the Marvelous Innuendo Defying Jimmy Walker in his Superhuman Exhibition of Skill, Strength and Endurance! * * * He wrestles a Legislative Committee and a Man-Eating Seabury single-handed! * * * This way! * * * Peanuts and popcorn! * * * Five a bag * * * Get a frankfurter and roll! * * * Ice-cold lemonade and soda!

* * * *

"Step right up, ladies and gentlemen! * * * See the greatest, most reckless troupe of newspaper and newsreel photographers ever gathered together under one tent! * * * Watch them in their unparalleled exhibition of nerve and daring! * * * Five hundred shutter-snappers and crank-turners * * * Count them!

* * * *

"Madame, you'll have to keep that little boy away from the Democratic minority cage! * * * It is unsafe to feed the animals! * * * Remember they are untamed! * * * Stand back there! * * * When aroused the Tiger is capable of unparalleled fury!

* * * *

"I call attenshun to the Unrivaled, Unsurpassed Herd of Imposing Legislators Massed in Formidable Formation! * * * In the rear behold Senor Telephone Curry's troupe of Applauding Seals! * * *

* * * *

"In the center ring, I call your attenshun to one of the most blood-curdling, hair-raising exhibitions ever witnessed by the eye of mortal man! * * * The Colossus of the Wise Crack will enter the arena and match his wits, strength and powers of endurance with the Peerless Prof. Seabury, the Titan of Quiz, unaccompanied except by 200 cameramen and his personal cheering section! * * * The professor uses no whip and no revolver! * * * He depends on agility alone! * * * Watch him! * * * Watch him!

* * * *

"To one side I show you Hofstadter, the gavel-wielding sensation of two continents! * * * He smashes desks! * * * He batters railings, arousing you to gasps of wondah! * * * Hear him! * * * It's all a wrist motion! * * * Ice-cold lemonade! * * * Hot frankfurters.

* * * *

"Now then, your attenshun to the main ring, please! * * * Are you ready, Professor Seabury? * * * Are you ready, Jimmy Walker? * * * Go! * * * Watch this stirring, matchless, unsurpassable duel! * * * Follow the thrust! * * * Note the clever parry! * * * Each and every jab a treat for man or beast! * * * Look! * * * He's got him! * * * He's down! * * * No, the professor nearly had him! * * * But he was too quick for him! * * * Ah! * * * Blood! * * * Do you hear me, ladies and gentlemen? BLOOD!

* * * *

"Get an ice-cold soda * * * Hot dogs! * * * And immediately after the big show the Unequaled Jimmy will amaze you with his sensational aerial act * * * He will fling La Belle Manhattan thru the air, catching her by the toes and leaving her unscathed!"

ANOTHER RECORD FOR JIMMY WALKER.

THE evidence that Mayor Walker got $246,692.76 from a brokerage account carried for him by Paul Block without ever putting up a penny would seem to put Jimmy on record as the original beneficiary of the so-called Block-Aid relief movement.

FORESIGHT.

The Block-Walker brokerage account was closed out on August 5, 1929. Which all people who remained in the market another two weeks will admit entitles both boys to a decoration for sagacity.

THEN AND NOW.

The Bawl Street Journal, the brokers' annual burlesque of the Wall Street Journal, makes the observation that the check that used to come back marked "No funds" now comes back marked "No bank."

NO ADVANTAGE HERE.

A robot or mechanical salesman has been invented and exhibited at a radio exposition. But the trouble just now is that all the customers are mechanical listeners.

"With all my worldly goods I thee endow" has been voted out of the Methodist marriage ritual. In a depression like this the comic reaction was too obvious.

Packing Firm Wins Safety Award.

A pennant has been awarded to the Phillips Genuine Saugage Co. here by the Institute of American Meat Packers because of its operation during April without any lost time accidents. The institute is conducting a safety campaign during 1932 among its member companies.

Civic Leaders Plan Giant Tax Protest

Gather in Chicago to "Lay Down Law" to Parties and Congress.

Chicago, May 29 (A.P.).—With the avowed purpose of "getting results from Congress and both political parties," 1,000 or more State and civic leaders from coast to coast will gather in Chicago this week in protest against mounting taxes.

The first aim of the conference is to make an impression upon Congress with the hope of tightening governmental purse strings during the remainder of the present session, during which many appropriation items are yet to be considered.

Secondly, it is intended to "lay down the law" to the platform makers of the Republican and Democratic national conventions. It was with that in view that the tax meeting was set for Chicago, scene of both conventions, just two weeks before the first of the political conclaves opens.

The conference opens Wednesday and extends through Thursday, with leaders in every field of industry in attendance. A proposed taxing program fair to all and burdensome to none is intended to be written out of the meeting.

According to Maryland State Police, Walter Moore, 26 years old, of 916 C street southeast, driver of the car, disappeared from the scene of the accident and was found about a mile away in the woods by Officer C. C Serman, of the State Police.

Moore was taken to the Marlboro Jail, where he is being held under a $1,000 bond on charges of driving while under the influence of liquor, reckless driving and leaving the scene of an accident. Moore told police he lost control of the machine on a curve and it careened from the road and struck the tree. He was unable to explain why he disappeared.

Girl Taken to Hospital.

Officer Serman, who responded to a call for aid, learned in which direction Moore left, trailed him for some time and finally located him in a thick patch of woods. Petree's body was lying beside the wreckage when he arrived, Serman said.

Miss Wilcher was brought to Casualty Hospital by a passing motorist. Two other passengers in the machine, Mr. and Mrs. John Frederick, of 703 Mount Vernon place northwest, were held as State's witnesses under bond of $50 each. They were uninjured.

Petree had been in Washington only a short time. He was from Durham, N. C.

Deaf Cyclist Is Killed When Struck by Auto

Failing to hear a warning horn, William Ward, colored, of Takoma Park, Md., was fatally injured yesterday, when the bicycle he was riding was struck by an automobile operated by James Hall, of 1439 Holly street northwest. Hall had blown his horn and was about to pass the man near White Oak on the Colesville pike, he said, when Ward swerved directly into the path of the auto.

Ward was taken by William L. Willson, of Burtonsville, Md., to the office of Dr. H. H. Howlett in Silver Spring, Md., for first aid treatment and then was removed to Emergency Hospital, where he died at 6 o'clock last night. Hall was arrested on the technical charge of reckless driving by Policeman Laurence Dixon and taken to the Silver Spring substation, Montgomery County. A brother of Ward told police he was deaf and probably had not heard the horn. Hall was released on bond.

Man, 75, Auto Victim, Is Dead of Injuries

Injuries received on April 15 when he was struck and knocked down by an automobile proved fatal last night to Jacharia Knox, 75 years old, of the Cairo Hotel. He died in Emergency Hospital from complications resulting from a fractured hip.

According to police reports, Knox was struck by a machine driven by Lewis Orr, 21 years old, of 7306 Blair road northwest. Orr was backing his car near Fifteenth and K streets northwest, when Knox was hit, police said.

Under sponsorship of the George Washington Lodge, of this city, the convention delegates were registered at the hotel yesterday morning. At 10 o'clock the first session was opened by Nathan Plotnick, chairman of the entertainment committee. During the morning, Representative Sol Bloom, of New York, addressed the assembly.

After the 1 o'clock adjournment the members of the ladies' auxiliary, who are meeting in the smaller ballroom at the hotel, enjoyed a sightseeing tour of the city. The men attended a luncheon at the Jewish Community Center.

In the afternoon session Representative Menalcus Lankford, of Virginia, talked to the assembled delegates on current topics. Nominations for the election of officers today were completed during the afternoon.

Many Are Renominated.

Many of the present officers were nominated for reelection. Among them was Samuel Steinbach, grand master of the order. Harry Mandanick was nominated for reelection as first grand deputy. Kayton, of Norfolk City Lodge, was nominated. J. Israelson and M. Adelansky were nominated for the fifth grand deputyship.

Alexander Goodman, of Baltimore, was nominated for grand councilor of the order. For grand secretary Alexander Pogarelski was nominated for reelection.

Under the leadership of Mrs. Bessie Bluefield, grand matron of the ladies' auxiliary, the women delegates nominated their officers for the coming year. They will ballot today. Mrs. B. Fox and Mrs. Betty Greenberk, of Baltimore, were nominated for grand matron. During the afternoon session the grand master commended David Schnaper, of the Washington Lodge, for his diligent work during the membership drive. Brother Schnaper brought in more than 300 new members. Bernard Danzansky, chairman of the resolutions committee, reported that his committee would have a number of important resolutions ready for consideration at today's session.

The convention will assemble at 9 o'clock this morning for election of officers. Business will be continued throughout the day. At 6 o'clock tonight a banquet will be held at the Jewish Community Center at Sixteenth and Q streets northwest. It is hoped that Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland, will be able to attend this function. Mayor Jackson, of Baltimore, will be one of the principal speakers.

Husband Sought as Wife Dies.

A blow on the back of the head from a board in the hands of her husband was said by police to have caused the death of Eliza Drummings, 20, colored, 1101 Pierce Court, at Freedmen's Hospital shortly after she was admitted there last night. Police are hunting for David Drummings, who escaped after striking the blow.

Robber Finds Coffin Items Dubious Loot

One of the most depressing thefts in Washington police annals was committed yesterday when thieves stole $129 worth of mortician's samples from the automobile of Glen Shepherd, a Binghamton, N. Y., coffin salesman. The theft took place in front of the Arlington Hotel, where Mr. Shepherd was registered.

Later on in the day the thieves, finding the loot to be a white elephant on their hands, abandoned it in the appropriate location of St. Mary's Cemetery, on Lincoln road northeast, where it was recovered by Fifth Precinct police.

The samples consisted of several cases of shrouds, gold candlesticks and casket handles.

Death of Woman By Gas Is Suicide

Despondency Because of Ill Health Believed Cause of Act.

Believed to have been despondent on account of ill health, Mrs. Bessie L. Hafiland, 47 years old, of the Ventosa Apartments, First and B streets northwest, was found dead in her gas-filled kitchen by her husband, Joseph Hafiland. He was awakened by the odor of gas early yesterday.

He immediately called the rescue squad and the Emergency Hospital ambulance, who responded and attempted to resuscitate her. However, all efforts proved unavailing, and she was pronounced dead by Dr. Neil Campbell, of Emergency Hospital. Deputy Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicidal death.

According to police, Mrs. Hafiland recently had been a patient in a nearby sanitarium.

Tribute by Negroes To Lee Counseled

Pastor Says Sectionalism and Racial Antagonism Should End.

Calling on Negroes to decorate today the graves of Robert E. Lee and George Washington, as well as those of Ulysses S. Grant and Abraham Lincoln, the Rev. S. P. W. Drew yesterday, at an open-air service in the triangle at Tenth and U streets northwest, advocated a united America, free from sectionalism and racial antagonisms. A memorial meeting will be held at the same place today at 3 o'clock.

The occasion yesterday was a service of children and accompanying adults who have conducted weekly an observance of the 313th anniversary of the landing of Negroes at Jamestown in 1619, the program being devoted especially to Crispus Attucks, for whom it is hoped a monument will be erected in the triangle. The Massachusetts Legislature, speakers stated, passed a bill, signed by the governor last week, making March 5 a legal holiday in honor of Attucks, the Negro whose monument stands on Boston Common in memory of his death there in the Boston Massacre.

Dairies and bakeries here have donated milk and foodstuffs for all the services conducted under these auspices, which are given free to the indigent and unemployed by Dr. Drew from 1317 Corcoran street northwest.

Policeman Dodges Auto, But Runs Into Another

While running across the street at Thirtieth and N streets northwest, and swerving to avoid being struck by an automobile, Private H. E. Watson, of the Seventh Precinct, ran into the side of the police radio car which was parked across the street.

After receiving treatment at Georgetown Hospital for minor lacerations, he returned to duty.

Policeman Learns Barking Dogs Bite Despite Axiom

Private A. M. Helwig, attached to the Sixth Precinct station early yesterday learned to his pain that the bite of a dog can sometimes be worse than its bark.

Residents in the vicinity of Fourth street and Delafield place northwest complained to the Sixth Precinct station that a dog was disturbing their slumbers by howls and barks, so Helwig was sent to investigate. Upon arriving at the scene he was savagely charged by a beast of nondescript breed and appearance which sullied the majesty (and epidermis) of the law by inflicting several severe bits on his right leg. With this Parthian shot the animal fled.

Private Helwig received treatment at Walter Reed Hospital and was relieved from duty.

4 MEN AND WOMAN ROB OIL STATION AND CITIZEN IN STREET

Force Manager to Give Up $4 on Threat of Death and Leave in Auto.

ESCAPE AFTER FAILING TO PAY FOR GASOLINE

Suspect Arrested in Another Case After Two Cab Drivers Are Robbed.

A quintet of bandits, one of whom is a woman, were the objects of an extensive police search last night after they held up and robbed a man on the street, attempted to assault and rob an oil station manager and escaped in an automobile with a tank full of gasoline they failed to pay for.

They first made their appearance at Second and D streets northwest. Traveling in a small car, with a man and woman in the rumble seat, the bandits pulled to the curb beside Elmer Jones, colored, of 212 D street northwest. Two of the men jumped from the front seat of the car and approached Jones with drawn guns.

The men forced him behind the machine, and on threat of death, demanded all his money. Jones was forced to surrender $4. With a parting warning not to move, the two men leaped into the machine and fled.

Attempt to Hit Manager.

A short time later a car answering the same description entered a gas station at Sixth and K streets northwest. The driver ordered the tank filled with gasoline.

Charles Applegate, manager of the station, complied. As he went to the driver to collect payment, he narrowly escaped being struck with a wrench held in the driver's hand. The man in the car swung at Applegate several times, half opened the machine door, then changed his mind and drove hurriedly away.

A police radio car from the First Precinct, manned by Privates H. R. Coleman and H. Boese, happened to pass the station as the car sped down the street. Recognizing the machine from a broadcast description, the policemen gave chase.

Get License Number.

The bandit car, however, eluded them after a pursuit of several block. The policemen managed to obtain the license numbers and investigation revealed they were listed to a man living near Twenty-first street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

About an hour later police hurried to Jefferson and Canal streets southeast, where the same machine had been reported seen. The car had left when they arrived, but on the ground nearby the police found the dial of a safe, leading to the belief that the bandits had the safe in the car and were attempting to open it.

Meanwhile, a man was arrested by police of the First Precinct after Jones, the first man held up by the quintet, declared he recognized him as one of the pair who robbed him at gunpoint.

Suspect Offers Alibi.

Jones told police he was standing near the corner where he was accosted by the bandits, when the man walked past. Jones grabbed him and held in until police arrived.

At the station house the man said he was Frank Myers, 28 years old, of Chevy Chase, Md. He declared that at the time of the robbery he was in Emergency Hospital being treated for an ailment. This was upheld by authorities at the hospital. Myers was held for investigation with Jones listed as the complainant.

A suspect in another robbery was arrested late yesterday following holdups earlier in the day in which small sums were taken from two taxi drivers and a pedestrian.

Taken Into Custody.

Richard Broadnax, colored, 21 years old, of 515 Q street northwest, was taken into custody by Headquarters Detectives A. M. Tolson and H. D. Robey after he is alleged to have attempted to hold up James Clay, colored, of 1226 Six-and-One-half street northwest.

Upon being identified by Clay, Broadnax was removed to the Second Precinct station.

Later Benjamin Richards, of 3579 Warder street northwest, was held up and robbed of $7.50 at the point of a pistol by two colored men who hired his taxicab at Fourteenth and Church streets northwest. Upon arriving at their destination at First and N streets northwest, they robbed him and fled. Richards gave their descriptions to police.

Believed by police to have been the victim of the same robbers, Claude Saunders, 39 years old, of 810 Lyons place northwest, was held up and robbed of $10 at New Hampshire avenue and Riggs place northwest, after he had been hired near Fifteenth and U streets northwest.

MEMORIAL DAY SEEN AS TRIBUTE TO PAST

Dr. H. W. Snyder Takes Verse From Samuel as Text of Sermon.

"May God help us fulfill our responsibility and accept our privilege here as at other places, and hand down to posterity the enchanced blessings that our faith has given to us," said Dr. Henry W. Snyder yesterday morning at St. Paul's Lutheran Church.

"Debits and Credits of Life," was the subject of Dr. Snyder's talk. He drew his text from the first verse of the ninth chapter of the Second Book of Samuel: "And David said, Is there yet any that is left of the house of Saul, that I may show him kindness for Jonathan's sake?"

Dr. Snyder said in part:

"What is the meaning of Memorial Day, and what is its teaching? A great king sat on his throne. After a long period of war, he had come to the place of peace. Surrounding nations paid him tribute; even today his own race points to his reign as the Golden Age of their history He is none other than the mighty David. Years before he had had a wonderful friend, one of those rare, disinterested characters who prefers truth to treachery, friendship to finance, and service to selfishness. Though the son of the king at that time, and with reasonable hope of the kingdom for himself, this man Jonathan accepted the will of God, and threw the weight of his influence for David. In the failure of King Saul, noble Jonathan too went down.

David Recalls Covenant.

"Twenty-five years have passed; and as the present King David has time to give himself to affairs of peace, his covenant with Jonathan comes to his mind, and he asks the question of the text, 'Is there yet any living of the house of Saul, that I may show him kindness for Jonathan's sake?' One survivor is found, a son Mephibosheth, a poor cripple, who, when his nurse fled with him on the day of Saul's death, became lame in both his feet through a fall. Now David searched him out, restores to him the lands of his father Saul, and gives him for life a place at his own table.

"This story brings us a fitting Memorial Day thought, namely, that we are debtors to a former generation. Other men have labored, and we are entered into the reward of their labors. Moreover, there is scarcely a realm in which this truth is not operative. Take, for example, the matter of education. Many of our children at the age of 12 years today know more than adults did 50 or 100 years ago.

Indebted to Past Generations.

"These are but a few of the many things that have come to us to make life more interesting and enjoyable. What a sacrifice of time, talent, in many cases of life itself, some of these improvements have meant. We are debtors to those who have labored and thus given us the result of their toil. Every generation stands on the shoulders of the preceding.

"Shall we decorate the graves of the heroes? We will do that. Shall we build monuments to their memory? We have done so. Shall we place bronze tablets to recall their deeds of heroism? This too has not been overlooked. Better even than any of these, let us enhance the value of what we have received, and let us create new blessings under the providence of God for future generations. For the sake of some Jonathan who has blessed our life, let us do a kindness to the future."

Heroic Dead Left Worthy Heritage, Pastor Declares

Victories Won in Time of Peace Held to Be More Valuable.

DR. FRANKLIN J. BOHANAN.

"The greatest honor we can do our heroic dead is to be worthy of the heritage they have bequeathed us," declared the Rev. Dr. Franklin J. Bohanan, preaching yesterday morning at the Rock Creek Episcopal Church.

"The roll of drum, the blare of trumpet, the flying flags, the plaudits of cheering throngs—these things did not make them heroes, for in the shambles of the battlefield these incidents of life on dress parade were not present, and yet they carried on, aye, unto death.

"Peace has its victories no less than war, and if on the battlefields these heroes sacrificed their very lives they did so because in times of peace they were quietly and diligently building up that strength of character and purpose necessary to see them through the supreme emergencies of life, in peace as well as war. A man does not suddenly become brave, courageous, honorable, loyal, devout on the call of arms. Those qualities of fine manhood which find expression in him as he marches with death, those heroic deeds of his which thrill the world, are but the natural and logical consequences of a life rightly molded and developed for constant and useful service in the humdrum time of peace.

"There are living heroes among us today—unknown men and women who bravely face emergencies as great and complex as any they would encounter on the battlefield, and it is to these men and women, refined in the crucible of suffering and self-sacrifice, that our country must look in the time of grave national danger.

"That time of grave national danger, however much we may picture it as a future conflict with some other nation of the world, is in reality the present. It is but folly to cry 'Peace! Peace!' when there is no peace. Those men and women today who quietly accept conditions and feel that there is no danger—that there is no conflict calling for their powers of manhood or womanhood—have required their shameful peace by ignominious surrender. It is only the irresponsible, lazy and indifferent who fail to see that we are now facing a crisis in our national life, and even though the near or remote result may not be war or revolution, any thoughtful people are beginning to fear the outcome.

"Any one with eyes to seen can see that a democracy built on character and brotherhood can not long exist after the fundamental principles on which it is built are destroyed. Foolish, yes, dangerous, are those patriots who seem to honor the memory of our heroic dead by waving flags, singing the national anthem and shouting and voting for larger standing armies and navies to meet some nation of the world in future conflict, while at the same time they allow secret enemies to destroy the Nation's character, or even worse, themselves join the army of national foes by marching with them shoulder to shoulder in immorality, lawlessness and injustice," Dr Bohanon went on.

"The conditions of the modern world are a challenge to every real patriot. Industry, politics, government—all present a chaotic mess under which most of the work of the world must be done today. In every sphere there is need of and a call to men of courage, who dare to speak the truth even though it is unwelcome, to maintain right in the face of opposition and prejudice, to keep laws when they are personally distasteful, to show the forbearing and forgiving spirit of Jesus, men and women who dare to stand as a minority of one, when the majority seem more willing to risk their souls than their bodies and more willing to risk their bodies than their property for their country's good.

"What this country and world need most today is the hero in the home, for the home is the basis of all social life. Separations and divorces are increasing because men and women are not brave enough to face the trifling annoyances and unpleasant conditions in the little social realm which is bounded by the four walls of their homes. Such cowards are not likely to show much courage when confronted with the difficulties in the larger spheres of social and national life.

"Many people can be brave in the outside world, when under the fire of the neighbor's eye, but are cowards in their own household—too cowardly to be Christian men or women. Heroism is not simply a matter of facing a foe on the field of battle. The real hero is the man or woman who dares to do the right thing when it is hard to do and when other people are afraid. When we have men and women who can conquer the drudgery of daily life, the commonplace duties which often seem so distasteful, who dare face failure again and again, who can master themselves in their own households, then we shall have such stuff as heroes are made of and our country will be prepared to meet any crisis.

"But, first, the patriot must prove himself conqueror in another field, the field of his own individual heart—where what we like wages warfare with what we ought. There the battle must be fought and won before any man can be a soldier in any of those other fields where he must meet his fellowman. In every war many men are ready and willing to die for their country, but our country is not going to become the Kingdom of Heaven on earth by having all its citizens die for it. We do not want a nation of dead men, however much we admire their heroism and cherish their memory. Today our country needs heroes who dare to live for it—men and women who are brave enough to face, not death, but life, that our nation may live and that our citizens may have life and have it more abundantly."

CLERIC RAPS WAR IN HIS SERMON ON UNKNOWN SOLDIER

Dr. F. B. Harris Uses as His Text, "What Mean Ye by These Stones?"

SEES STORY CONTAINED IN IMPRESSIVE SHRINE

Declares Fighting Today Can Only Write Epitaph of Present People.

"Who can doubt that the Unknown Soldier speaks to the Nation about war, about the unfairness of it, the horror of it, the sheer insanity of it," said Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, preaching yesterday morning at the Foundry Methodist Episcopal Church.

"The Unknown Soldier is right. Perhaps in days past, in spite of the horrors of war some good came out of it, but today war can only write the epitaph of our present civilization. Today forces and instrumentalities are in the hands of the military powers that in a few hours would depopulate London and Paris and Washington and New York of their millions. The next war, if it comes, will not be just army against army, but whole populations against whole populations," Dr. Harris said.

His topic was "The Unknown Soldier Speaks." He drew his text from the sixth verse of the fourth chapter of Joshua, "What mean ye by these stones?"

Eloquent in Silence.

"Overlooking the Nation's Capital on a hill that can not be hid, is the grave of the Unknown Soldier. As with rustling shade summer comes back to Arlington it finds a new white stone to mark this sacred spot. This colossal piece of unmarred marble is the high altar in the temple of the Nation's remembrance," the speaker said.

"The leafy aisles of Arlington's Abbey of Memory are marked by stones with tongues eloquent in their silence. In this shrine of each patriot's devotion general and private sleep side by side in the democracy of death. In the midst of impressive monuments without number is a vast army of low white stones, row on row stretching across the templed vales. To ask the question, what mean these stones? is to ask what means America. For here lies the sacred dust of those who have signed in the crimson of their own devotion every gift of freedom which we enjoy.

Sacramental Symbol.

"The new stone at the grave of the Unknown, with its perfection of quarrying and artistry, is more than a superb piece of unblemished marble. It is a sacramental symbol, a symbol with an inner meaning which no orator can compass by his eloquence which no poet can reach with the lilting cadences of his song, and which no historian can measure with the cold lines of his printed page.

"Somehow, I hear the Unknown speaking not only about the horror of war but about the victories of peace with eyes that see what most of those still immersed in the busy affairs of life do not see, namely, that the penalties of the wars of the past and the dangers and fears of the wars of the future have done more than any other factor to wreck the whole fabric of our economic system."

MONEY AND CLOTHES STOLEN FROM SHOPS

Police are investigating the entry and ransacking of three business establishments early yesterday morning. The thefts consisted of clothing and a small amount of cash.

Ben Livingston, of 4701 Connecticut avenue northwest, informed police that his store at 906 Seventh street northwest was entered by breaking the show window with a brick. Clothing valued at $62 was stolen. Fingerprints were found on the window.

Maurice Eiseman, of 3100 Connecticut avenue, manager of Velati's Grill at 609 Fourteenth street northwest, told police the storeroom was entered by jimmying the transom above the front door and cash taken from the cash register.

Benjamin Goldstein, of 4306 Arkansas avenue northwest, notified police that his clothing store at 434 Seventh street northwest was entered by breaking the show window and clothing valued at $76 stolen.

Plasterers Score Wage Reductions

Prosperity Bond Issue Is Indorsed by Members of Local Union.

At a regular meeting yesterday of the local Union Operative Plasterers and Cement Furnishers International Association, opposition was taken against wage cuts, the membership heartily indorsing the proposed prosperity bond issue.

All delegates to the Building Trades Council were instructed to work for the support and passage of the prosperity loan.

TRADE BOARD SHIP VISITS ANNAPOLIS

Steamer Will Go to Norfolk Today and Leave for Capital Tonight.

By Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., May 29.—Sunny skies greeted the Washington Board of Trade cruising party this morning as the Steamship District of Columbia docked alongside the U. S. Naval Academy and the party of more than 200 holiday-makers hastened ashore for a two-hour sightseeing tour.

The first night on board was a gala one, featured by an after-dinner concert and presentation of handsome prizes to 20 of the ladies on the passenger list. Virginia Sellers, the singer who won The Washington Post recording contest, made a great hit, sharing honors on the musical program with McGregor Brown. Leon Brusiloff and his orchestra furnished the music for the concert and a dance which followed.

Although this cruise is to last only three days, a ship paper is being published, the first issue making its appearance this morning. John T. Bardroff, general chairman of the party, is publisher, and Joseph A. Burkart is editor. The little paper contains an editorial, a short article on the Naval Academy and notes about various persons aboard.

The District of Columbia headed for the Patuxent River and Solomons Island later in the morning.

The ship was to anchor at Hampton Roads tonight, assuring a good night's rest for all aboard.

The program tomorrow is packed with good things—disembarkment at Norfolk, a swim at Ocean View, luncheon at the Nansemond Hotel, and a trip in the afternoon to Virginia Beach, where the Board of Trade celebrants will attend the opening of the Cavalier Beach Club.

The District of Columbia will leave Norfolk tomorrow night on the return trip to Washington.

Cohen and Kelly 'Pay' Visit To Court, But Not Socially

Liquor Possession Laid to Baltimore Man While Harrisburg Resident Faces Traffic Charge; Third Arrest Completes Scene at Bethesda.

The Cohens and the Kellys visited Justice of the Peace Frederick Van Court at Bethesda, Md., yesterday—but not socially.

Michael Kelly, of Baltimore, Md., came in with Montgomery County Policeman J. S. McAuliffe to be introduced on a charge of possession with intent to sell of intoxicants and exceeding a speed of 25 miles. The policeman had to go against all polite usage and chase Kelly a couple of miles on Connecticut avenue before he could obtain an introduction. The car had a load of 456 quarts of alleged liquor, Policeman McAuliffe told the judge.

When the policeman entered with his prisoner, Station Clerk James Nichols jokingly remarked: "Now, if you had brought a Cohen along, we could have a show." A few minutes later Corpl. Oscar Gaither entered with C. Harris Cohen, of Harrisburg, Pa., charged with exceeding 25 miles an hour on Wisconsin avenue. He also was introduced to Judge Van Court but instead of a bouquet he received a receipt for $11 collateral.

Just to top things off, Policeman Roy Davis brought Ernest Williams, colored, of Hagerstown, Md., in a few minutes later for exceeding a speed of 40 miles in a 25-mile zone. Williams is going to visit Judge Charles W. Woodward in Rockville Police Court. Williams was in a terrible hurry, he said, because he didn't want to miss the bout between the Yankees and the Nationals at Griffith Stadium.

Fire Box Is Pulled to Get Quick Aid to Woman, Hurt

If you want service—and plenty of it—pull a fire alarm box. An unidentified man last night learned that the fire department can always be depended on in an emergency.

The man, passing the corner of Third and C streets southwest, saw a woman rush from the front porch of a house, stagger to the corner and collapse in the street. Hurrying to her aid, he found she had been injured.

Prompt action was necessary. The rescue squad was needed. Without a moment's hesitation, the man turned in a fire alarm from a corner box.

Screeching engines and police cars were quickly on the scene. The woman was taken to Emergency Hospital. She said her name was Clara Williams, colored, of 317 C street southwest. She was injured when struck on the head by a companion and suffered a possible fractured skull.
